

Reserves?

Hotter War Ahead

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson said Tuesday it is "quite possible" the United States soon will have to make "new and serious decisions" in the expanding war in South Viet Nam.

Johnson said he is also considering expanding the U.S. draft and calling up military reservists, but no decisions have been reached on that score. (See also Page 5.)

"The government is always considering every possibility and every eventuality," the president told a television press conference.

INCREASED AGGRESSION

Johnson said the North Vietnamese had "increased aggression" in the south. This "increased aggression" from the north may require an increased American response on the ground in the south."

U.S. forces will defend their own bases and "they will be available for more active combat," whenever U.S. field commanders decide it necessary, said the president.

DECISION NECESSARY

"It is quite possible that new and serious decisions will be necessary in the near future."

The president also announced that Russia had accepted a U.S. proposal to resume disarmament talks in a 17-country conference at Geneva by July 27.

The U.S. is anxious to maintain workable relations with Russia and considerable pro-

Canadians 'Camp Followers'

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's support of United States intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic has made this country little better than "camp followers" of the U.S., T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday. (See also Page 5.)

In Sweden, Yugoslavia and India have developed foreign policies independent of the great powers, Mr. Douglas said, and as a middle power Canada could give leadership to the non-aligned and non-nuclear powers.

Canadian foreign policy should be independent, give greater support to the United Nations by moving away from regional alliances and include a substantial increase in foreign aid.

House Backs Hanging Bill

LONDON (UPI) — The House of Commons early today passed the bill to abolish the death penalty in Britain.

The vote on the bill, sponsored by Labour Party member Sydney Silverman, was 200 to 98. The bill now goes to the House of Lords which has the power to delay its passage into law.

Mrs. Sides breaks down

War Wife Target Of Vandals, Calls

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Mrs. Jane Sides, 27, said Monday night her life has been threatened by anonymous phone callers since June 9, two days after a newspaper story described a letter she received from her husband, who is reported missing in Viet Nam.

She called police after receiving an anonymous telephone call from a man who said:

"I know you are alone in the house with only a woman and a child. You will not live through the night."

Police told Mrs. Sides they will patrol the area at regular intervals.

Mrs. Sides, wife of Staff Sgt. Richard Sides, said two crude bombs have been thrown at her home. She said one burned off paint on the porch.

She said the callers, sometimes a man and at other times a woman, have said:

"Get out of the neighborhood. Your husband is killing innocent women and children in Viet Nam. We'll kill you if you don't get out of the country."

She said she had kept the threats and bombs secret until now in an effort to prevent her mother, who lives with her, from learning of them. Her son, Richard Jr., is five years old.

Her husband's letter, which touched off the incidents, read in part:

"The bad part is we don't know how long we'll be over here. Maybe one, two, six months. Only God knows..."

Mrs. Sides said her paratrooper husband had been reported missing with several members of his 17th Airborne Brigade.

Vancouver Tie-Up

Grain Handlers' Strike Spreads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike of grain handlers here spread to two more elevator companies Tuesday and threatened an imminent stop of all grain ship-ments from Vancouver.

Two companies employing 150 men remained in operation, but the major terminals — Alberta Wheat Pool, United Grain Growers, and Saskatchewan Wheat Pool — were shut down. (See also Page 20.)

An official of Alberta Wheat Pool said that in the event of a general walkout all rail shipments of grain to Vancouver would be immediately suspended. About 425 cars arrive daily when all five terminals are operating.

The dispute is over alleged re-routing of grain originally intended for the Alberta Wheat Pool, where 125 grain handlers have been on strike for five weeks.

Tuesday afternoon 85 workers at United Grain Growers were dismissed for refusing to handle grain they said was transferred from the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Montreal (CP) — Ex-trade minister George Hees, moving ever closer to a political comeback, called Tuesday for creation of a new policy-producing mechanism within the Conservative party.

The new mechanism would channel ideas from the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said in an interview his travels across the country have convinced him Canadians are disappointed with the Pearson government's performance and

Postmen Threaten Go-Slow

OTTAWA (CP) — Maybe the weather can't slow the mail but low pay to postmen can and will, say many postmen across Canada.

Letter carriers and sorters in Vancouver, Toronto and now Montreal have indicated the federal government must meet demands for a 3000 across-the-board annual raise or strikes and postal slowdowns will follow.

Work-to-Rule May Delay City Mail

Postal clerks in Victoria will follow the national policy of the Postal Clerks' Association, according to local association president Gerald F. Kenny.

"If the policy is to implement a work-to-rule program we will then follow the regulations to the letter," he said.

There are 100 clerks in the Victoria branch of their association, and implementation of a work-to-rule policy will impede the flow of mail in the city, said Mr. Kenny.

President Jack Bell of the Letter Carriers' Association could not be reached for comment.

Beatle-Faced Dog Will Avoid Pound

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Stephen Lewis, a 15-year-old boy sporting a Beatle-type haircut with bangs which reach his eyebrows, wears Fayette County dog license No. 2215.

He will wear the metal tag on his shirt collar until he gets a haircut.

That's the ultimatum from his father, Dr. Ben Lewis, head of the department of philosophy and religion at Transylvania College.

When Stephen refused to shear his locks, Dr. Lewis reached the end of his patience and ordered a dog tag for Stephen as well as tags for his English setter, Seth, and his spitz, Princess.

The license application listed the "dog's" name as Stephen Lewis, his breed as "American beatle" and markings as "boy with bangs."

Hees Says Voters Need Alternative

Tap Best Brains for Tory Ideas

MONTREAL (CP) — Ex-trade minister George Hees, moving ever closer to a political comeback, called Tuesday for creation of a new policy-producing mechanism within the Conservative party.

The new mechanism would channel ideas from the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said in an interview his travels across the country have convinced him Canadians are disappointed with the Pearson government's performance and Armed with such policies, Mr. Hees is convinced the party can out the present Liberal government and return to power.

Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said in an interview his travels across the country have convinced him Canadians are disappointed with the Pearson government's performance and

"shocked by the conduct of its members."

Before they will turn the present administration out, however, the voters will have to be convinced they have a real alternative to Liberal policies, any bid to defeat the present government — such as Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has promised this fall over the Diefenbaker report — would be "meaningless."

Prison Garb Clue To Latest Escape?

LONDON (Reuters) — Police are examining two sets of yellow-striped prison clothes found Tuesday in a field 150 miles from London, seeking clues to the hiding place of escaped "great train robber" Ronald Biggs.

The prison clothes, first spotted by a truck driver, were the only solid clues in a day of frustrating false alarms.

MASTERMIND

Newspapers Tuesday claimed police now know the name of the criminal mastermind who organised the escape of Biggs from Wandsworth prison last Thursday.

Officers were said to be combing the underworld for the man and his accomplices.

The newspaper reports said the prison break mastermind was a man with a prison record who was questioned by police in 1961 after an earlier break from Wandsworth.

FOUR ESCAPE

Biggs and three other men escaped Thursday on ladders thrown into the prison yard by accomplices on top of a furniture truck which parked outside the walls.

One of the two sets of prison clothes found in a roadside field near the quiet town of Taunton was believed to belong to Biggs. They were sent to London to confirm their ownership.

It is likely to be weeks before bathers can use the beaches with impunity.

U.S. Navy to Blame

Resort Area Ruined by Oil

CANNES, France (Reuters) — A four-mile stretch of the most expensive bathing beach in the world may be unusable for several weeks because the wrong lever was pulled, or the wrong button pushed, on the U.S. aircraft carrier Shangri-La.

A sailor was ordered to empty the carrier's water tanks for cleaning Monday, as the Shangri-La lay at anchor off Cannes, and accidentally emptied an oil tank instead.

BLACK OIL

Some 2,650 gallons of black oil was dropped into the Mediterranean Sea.

Within hours, every wave washing the Riviera beach left behind a sticky smudge on rocks and sand.

Two hundred U.S. sailors worked all night under the lights to try to make good the damage, digging trenches to prevent the oil from spreading further, and spreading a substance designed to make it sink to the sea bottom.

The coagulant material was also dropped from a helicopter, but it soon ran short.

Speech 'Shocking'

NDP Blasts LaMarsh

TORONTO (CP) — The New Democratic Party Tuesday unanimously approved a resolution rapping Health Minister LaMarsh for her weekend statement that the Hall commission recommendations for a national health care scheme may never be implemented.

Stanley Knowles, NDP member of Parliament for Winnipeg North Centre, was given loud applause when he termed the minister's speech in Toronto "shocking."

Miss LaMarsh said here during the weekend that the royal commission, headed by Supreme Court Justice Emmett Hall, failed to take into account the fact that provinces now are legislating more extensively within their own jurisdictions.

She said a national health plan was inevitable but it may not be based on the Hall commission report, which recommended a comprehensive plan operated by the provinces with financial and co-ordinating help from the federal government.

The resolution said the NDP would use "all possible means to express its indignation" at the Liberal government's continued violation of the public interest.

It condemned the health minister's statement because a definite federal proposal had been expected at next week's federal-provincial conference.

Prime Minister Pearson has announced that social security, including ways to co-ordinate and provide for the health needs of Canadians, will be the first item on the conference agenda.

The resolution said Miss LaMarsh's speech was a betrayal of Liberal election promises, was against the desires of the Canadian people and would mean continued suffering for many sick persons who receive insufficient medical care.

Demand for Silence?

THE SPECIAL REPORT on Canada-United States relations as drawn up by Arnold Heeney, former Canadian ambassador to Washington, and Livingston Merchant, former American ambassador to Ottawa, on the orders of Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson may well have been necessary at this time to clarify certain areas of diplomatic and commercial intercourse between the two nations and set the guidelines for future joint policies.

However, Canadians may be forgiven if they view with some alarm the fact that this preliminary draft of "principles for partnership" between Canada and the United States so strongly and specifically stresses the need for Canada to refrain from public criticism of American foreign policy except where special Canadian interests are involved.

Not only does the actual wording of this section of the report, which reads, "It is important and reasonable that Canadian authorities should have careful regard for the U.S. government's position in this world context and, in the absence of special Canadian interests or obligations, avoid so far as possible public disagreement, especially upon critical issues" require considerably more elucidation than has yet been provided but also the intent behind the statement calls for a detailed and honest explanation.

Neither the report's recommendation that such divergent views should be expressed and resolved "in private" through diplomatic channels "in the abiding interests of both countries" nor its declaration that this suggestion does not refer to "all those whose freedom to criticize official policies at home and abroad is clear and equally cherished in both countries" serve to lessen the impact of what may easily be interpreted as a direct demand for Canadians to keep their mouths shut in future.

It may be said that such an interpretation is the result of deliberately misreading the report. Yet if this is so, then the fault must primarily rest with the author rather than the reader.

For instance, what is meant by "Canadian authorities"? Does it mean only the prime minister (who earlier this year committed the unforgivable gaffe of telling an American audience in Philadelphia that there should be a pause in the U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam) and his colleagues who now administer the affairs of this country?

Or does it embrace members of the opposition parties as well? Does it seek to put a muzzle on every member of the public who does not happen to agree with the American policy?

And why the detailed reference to "special Canadian interests or obligations"? Surely being a member of the United Nations, a senior member of the Commonwealth and an active partner in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization spreads Canada's special interests and obligations around the world—even including Viet Nam.

Surely such a demand — no matter how diplomatically or gently its terms are couched—which would order Canada to remain silent on matters which affect her and the rest of the world cannot now or ever be countenanced by Canadians.

Mission to Moscow

WHILE MR. AVERELL HARRIMAN is in Moscow for a few days, the American ambassador-at-large may have the opportunity of wading, if not winning, a better understanding of the aims of the United States and her allies in South Viet Nam.

It might be said the signs are propitious. Both Mr. Brezhnev, Communist party secretary, and Premier Kosygin in recent speeches have tended to be less critical of the U.S. policy in the Far East. At the same time they harshly rejected Peking's suggestion for a wider Russian involvement in Viet Nam's pliable affairs.

The British diplomatic point of view suggests that Russian refusal to receive the Commonwealth peace mission was taken with regret and that they were equally reluctant to abandon efforts to secure a conference on Cambodian neutrality.

Moscow radio broadcast the Saturday speech of Mr. Michael Stewart, British foreign secretary, which asked for a new approach to a Viet Nam conference. These little straws may point to a change in the wind of Soviet policy.

Mr. Harriman, even since he worked so closely with Stalin on lend-lease arrangements during the Second World War, has had the ear of the men in the Kremlin as often as any other Western diplomat. The man who inherited from his father the Union Pacific Railway as part of a more than $40,000,000 fortune might seem an unlikely delegate to send among the Soviets, but he has had successes there. Now he has another opportunity, and at a time when any move towards better understanding would be welcome to the world.

Grin and Bear It

THE CO-OPERATIVE Commonwealth Federation was the CCF on almost everybody's lips; probably not one voter in five could have said offhand and accurately what the initials stood for. When the CCF and labor joined to form the New Democratic Party, the belief of the organization was that this shorter label would be applied in full.

To think so was a mistake. The party has become, to most people, simply the NDP.

But the New Democrats have shown good sense at their federal convention in voting overwhelmingly against shortening the name to the Democratic Party in hope of different treatment. Such a change probably would merely have succeeded in turning them into the Dems.

In this difficulty the NDP—like every other much-publicized or publicity-seeking group in our society—is first of all up against the needs of the newspaper headline writers who must strive to convey a maximum of information in a limited space. But the party is also contending with human nature itself—otherwise there would be all Williams and no Bills, all Roberts and no Bobs.

The implication by Mr. Val Scott of Toronto at the convention was that the use of "NDP" to designate the New Democrats is a sinister strategy of the older political parties: "They spit out the initials," he said, "and I don't think we should give them this kind of club to beat us with." But it is interesting to note that in accusing them of this nasty practice, he referred not to the Progressive Conservatives, but the Tories.

Which suggests that unless someone can come up with a four or five-letter party name of satisfactory significance, the NDP might as well continue to grin and bear its abbreviated name with the same nonchalance as the said Tories, the Grits and the Socreds.

"Maybe their special projects architect resigned."

Ottawa Offbeat

Letting the Stew Grow Cold

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

ODD, isn't it, that in the closing days of this past first half of the session, the Opposition acted as if the Dorian report was a private, even secret document, and nobody's business really but the government's?

For, with scarcely a question and not so much as a peep of protest, Conservative, New Democrat, Social Credit and Liberals alike scampered out of Ottawa as uncaring for tomorrow as a class of kindergarten kids romping home for the holidays.

In fact, most didn't bother to wait for the summer recess bells to ring.

Was the government, with the Dorian report piling embarrassment on embarrassment, vulnerable?

The Opposition, Conservative and New Democrat, both about ed, but doing nothing about it, hurried home.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker and New Democratic Leader Douglas have said they'll "let it simmer over the summer and bring it to a boil" when the well-paid Parliament was ready, but it was still cold on the back of the stove with the fire out when they thought they were ready to serve.

On the recent record, no.

Remember the last headline scandal, the Curry report?

Horses on the national defence payroll at Petawawa?

A private $25,000 "fish pond" built, courtesy of the unsuspecting taxpayers, for the pleasure of an army general in the North Ontario bush?

The railway spur line, torn up by some enterprising army wheeler-dealers and sold for scrap?

The Petawawa base homes stripped of refrigerators, washers, sinks, even toilets, for private army profit on the scrap market?

The golf course for the Brass, hacked out of the Ottawa Valley sand dunes and scrub pine by uncomplaining private?

The hobby horse fashioned for the general's son?

The Conservatives were going to let that one "simmer" too, and "bring it to the boil" when the political stew was ready, but it was still cold on the back of the stove with the fire out when they thought they were ready to serve.

Ah, say the Conservatives this time, it's different.

The prime minister has promised "action," charges and prosecutions in the courts for bribery and what he and Chief Justice Dorian have both termed "a conspiracy to flout the law."

And with such cases before the courts, pleads the Opposition, who can forget the Dorian report of bribery, coercion and corruption in high government places?

Almost anybody can and probably will.

Just like they did when those horses-on-the-payroll, the fishing pond builders, the army scrap dealers, the used railway line salesmen and those other Petawawa entrepreneurs came before the courts. The reports of those cases made the back pages and by the time the Opposition got around to making something out of it, nobody cared. There were other things to worry about.

Ah well, Opposition leaders and MPs are only human, and who wants to spend the two-short summer working here in the hot capital when those holiday breezes are blowing so invitingly from the cool and pleasant holiday hills of home?

For Thailand

A Bright Outlook

By EDWARD NEILAN from Bangkok

WE'VE resisted colonialism and Communism, but we may yet be defeated by traffic. My Thai friend lifted his hands from the steering wheel of his car in a gesture of exasperation. We were waiting for a traffic light to change at the corner of Sukumvit Road and Rajprasong Avenue. It was rush hour and it seemed that every one of Thailand's 60,000 registered automobiles was at this particular intersection.

When I first came to Bangkok, almost 10 years ago, both streets were khlongs (canals) with narrow roads alongside. These roads were jammed with sampans (bicycle rickshaws) and a few automobiles and trucks.

Now the khlongs have all been filled in and covered with broad roadways. The sampans have been banished to up-country towns.

Thailand has long been governed in the forefront by a military junta.

Marshal Sarit Thanarat, a much-loved and benevolent old general, died in office and a scandal arose over his free-spending ways as premier.

His successor, Prime Minister Thammon Kittikachorn, is supposedly guiding the country toward elections of some sort, perhaps later this year.

But the overall aura of instability in the neighboring Southeast Asian countries has caused some hesitation among leaders about hurrying toward a more democratic government.

Border skirmishes with neighboring Cambodia continue intermittently and these may increase as Cambodia smuggles closer to the Communists.

But all of these problems fail to dim Thailand's bright outlook.

There are indications that even more capital will be attracted to the country (a U.S.-Thai tax agreement just signed will spur influx of private U.S. funds).

The Mekong River development program spells more jobs for thousands of Thais over the next few years.

The Asian Development Bank was discussed at length here recently by Eugene Black, President Johnson's special adviser.

It is likely that the bank's headquarters will be located in Bangkok.

This golden-spurred city is already the headquarters of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East.

It is likely to be the centre of President Johnson's billion-dollar aid program for Southeast Asia.

(UPI News Service)

Thai dancing and Thai boxing attracted some tourists in those days.

Now the city of 2,000,000 is in the midst of a neon explosion.

Bright lights proclaim everything from "Jet to Malaysia" to "Wimpy Hamburgers."

There is a Mexican taco shop, Japanese restaurants, Chinese restaurants, Korean restaurants—even a San Francisco-type bar called "The Trolley."

There are more than 10,000 foreigners—not counting Chinese residents—who live and work in Bangkok. Thousands more Americans work up-country in serious and sometimes secret military and civilian jobs relating to the fight against Communism in Southeast Asia.

English is becoming more and more the lingua franca of business.

Just like they did when those horses-on-the-payroll, the fishing pond builders, the army scrap dealers, the used railway line salesmen and those other Petawawa entrepreneurs came before the courts. The reports of those cases made the back pages and by the time the Opposition got around to making something out of it, nobody cared. There were other things to worry about.

Ah well, Opposition leaders and MPs are only human, and who wants to spend the two-short summer working here in the hot capital when those holiday breezes are blowing so invitingly from the cool and pleasant holiday hills of home?

Thailand is booming. Its economy is soaring and a whole new urban working middle class is developing with tastes and a passion for cars, cameras and cabarets.

Some observers feel this working class in Bangkok will some day be the real target of Communist subversion. Right now preoccupation with fighting Communism is the back page of the newspaper and by the time the Opposition got around to making something out of it, nobody cared. There were other things to worry about.

Ah well, Opposition leaders and MPs are only human, and who wants to spend the two-short summer working here in the hot capital when those holiday breezes are blowing so invitingly from the cool and pleasant holiday hills of home?

That prophecy may come true. But the Reds may find it tough chipping.

Besides a sound economy, Thais have some deeper resources.

One is their religion—Buddhism. There are 21,000 temples in Thailand, or one for every 1,000 Thais.

Buddhism here is highly developed, the hierarchy is clearly defined, the ritual is carefully laid out. This is in contrast to the interrupted history and spotty organization of South Vietnamese Buddhism, which led to political exploitation there.

The Thais also have a sort of reverence for their king and queen.

The Royal house has gone through some rough weather in the last half century.

There have been three coups d'état, an abdication, and the murder of the present king's predecessor, Ananda Mahidol.

The royal house was in a shambles when the 22-year-old Ananda was found with a bullet in his head one summer morning in 1946.

But the new King Bhumibol Adulyadej (Rama IX) has put out every effort to restore the royal to a position of respect and make it with Buddhism, one of the foundation stones of the Thai society.

The project failed. Despite widespread popular support it did not pass the Congress of the French Socialist Party, which, cleverly maneuvered by Guy Mollet, introduced into the program demands which the other partners could not accept. He especially revived the nostalgic anti-clericalism of the 20th century and demanded that the church be separated from the state.

Mollet knew what he was doing: without saying so publicly he did not want to abandon his old party or renounce his shop-worn ideologies.

For almost a century the word "reaction" has been astrologically placed on the right.

This was defensible at the time when the right represented the declining agrarian order. Today, nevertheless, the Industrial Revolution in turn belongs to history; the parties inspired by its principles are in our days as far removed from reality as were the Conservatives of 1870.

Present problems are different from those which beset the preceding generation. The solidarity of interests and the rise of a homogeneous society renders all programs directly or indirectly inspired by class struggle hopelessly obsolete.

The reaction of youth shows this. Marxist-Leninist Communism divides all over free Europe. Four-fifths of the party-members are over 40 years old.

This is a fact on which the European left should meditate. Instead of looking for "reaction," elsewhere it would do better to re-appraise realistically its own attitudes. To do this would serve the general interest. A parliamentary democracy, in order to work properly, needs not only a solid right but also a left which, instead of fighting the ghosts of the past, is ready to face the problems of tomorrow.

In spite of the apathy and political ignorance of the average voter, there is one important point which your correspondents have missed and that is the fear of the average married man employed in a financial or industrial enterprise that he will find himself unemployed if he should dare to speak his mind and differ from the pattern of thought as laid down by the powers-that-be. This is an idle statement and many men I know have told me that they would not dare to express or write a controversial opinion on any national or international question as they would be immediately branded as "trouble-makers."

FOR political reliability and conformity of speech and behavior. From refugees' statements it appears that part of the state apparatus is devoted to establishing the acceptability of citizens, and that this has led to corruption and to something closely resembling the protection racket of Western gangsters.

U.K. Makes New Move For Peace

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain Tuesday disclosed a new initiative over Indochina as a special British emissary flew out of Hanoi after an apparent rebuff.

Viet Nam Armies Build Up

SAIGON (Reuters) — Both the U.S. — supported South Vietnamese government and the Communist Viet Cong are engaged in an all-out recruiting drive as the long war in Viet Nam appears to be moving toward crisis.

Authorities in Saigon have stepped up an all-out drive against draft dodgers.

Current government planning calls for an expansion of the armed forces from 500,000 men to an approximate 600,000 by the end of this year. This includes civil police and part-time militia formations.

The Viet Cong have an estimated 10,000 regular troops in the field, with 80,000 in varying degrees of part-time service.

Foreign allies are pouring men into the battle. The United States is increasing its contribution immediately to more than 70,000 men, with an expected target of between 100,000 and 120,000 for the fall.

Canada Joins NATO In Backing U.S.

PARIS (CP) — Canada joined several North Atlantic partners Tuesday in expressing sympathy and understanding of the United States position in South Viet Nam.

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. Marines battled the Viet Cong in two sectors near the Da Nang Air Base Monday and are reported to have killed 48 guerrillas. A spokesman said Tuesday five marines died and 17 were wounded.

One flight flamed only three miles southwest of Da Nang, where marines were clearing an area the Communists might use for a mortar attack.

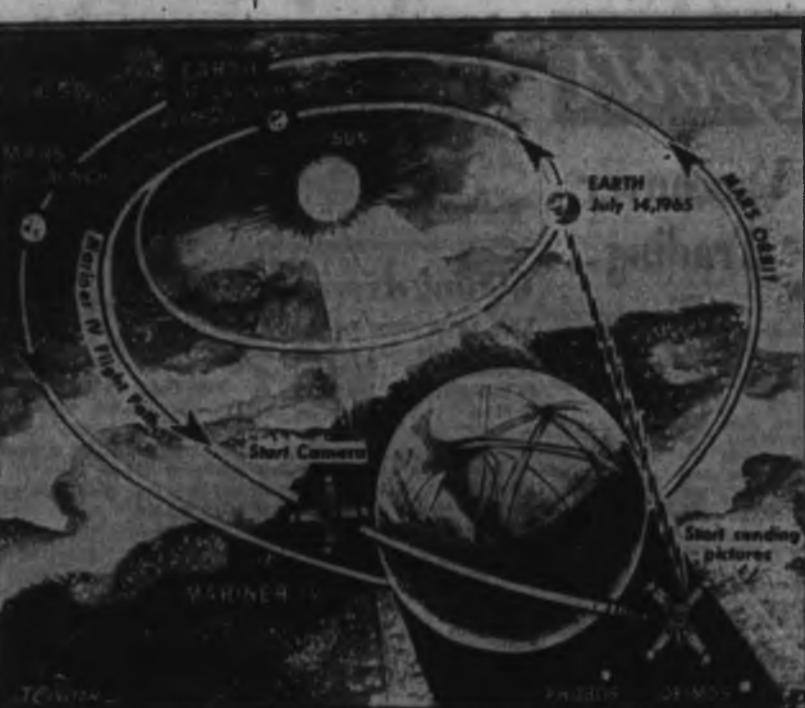

The other developed during a marine mission that relieved an embattled Vietnamese government outpost 11 miles south of Da Nang, itself 380 miles north east of Saigon.

Vietnamese government forces, gunning elsewhere for the Communist enemy, said they slew 42 in two engagements.

Mariner IV Will Send Mars Shots

World's first inter-planetary television station, Mariner IV, is scheduled to start taking pictures of Mars today. Scientists estimate about 17 televised shots will be sent back to earth before the space-craft reaches dark side of planet. Shots will be taken from between 9,438 miles to 6,770 miles above planet's surface, and will show objects as small as two miles long. So far the mission has gone without hitch, unlike Russian program, Zone-2, which was launched two days after Mariner IV. — (AP)

Welfare Council Attacks Hall Health Commission

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian Welfare Council Tuesday attacked the "major gaps and weaknesses" in the Hall commission report on health services.

It recommended that "serious and thorough" consideration be given to the "vital place" of social welfare in a national and income maintenance.

MAGNIFICENT

Welfare council president R. M. Alexander said the criticism is not meant to obscure the magnificent contribution that the Hall report makes to the development of health services for Canadians.

The council already has endorsed the report's general aims. "We have tried to offer some guides to those who must take final responsibility for building on the foundations laid by the Royal Commission in its historic document."

CONFERENCE

While submitting the 27-page document to Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, provincial premiers, ministers and deputy ministers of health and welfare, Alexander said he hoped it would be useful at the Federal-Provincial conference here next week.

The spokesman said that Ball, at whose request the meeting was held, said the U.S. expects "a difficult summer."

The council's main complaint

Dorion Report 'Inadequate'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Tuesday the Dorion report was "inadequate" and the commission should be reconvened to probe infiltration into the federal government by international crime.

The facts so far uncovered by the inquiry, said Thompson, indicated the Mafia was "pushing its tentacles" into Canadian government and just how far they reach should be investigated by an inquiry with wider powers.

WIDER POWERS
Despite the original Dorion inquiry, "we do not know what depth international crime has infiltrated into government," said Thompson.

He called on Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson to reconvene the commission of Chief Justice Frederic Dorion and give him enlarged powers to investigate just how big a hold crime has on the central government.

AT MEETING

Thompson said Pearson should do this following discussion with the provincial premiers at the dominion-provincial conference opening here Monday. The growing influence of crime in Canada is on the agenda of the week-long conference.

POLITICAL SOLUTION

The U.S. wants a political solution but feels no progress can be anticipated as long as the other side — North Viet Nam — shows no willingness to open diplomatic negotiations.

Several countries, including Canada, urged Ball to provide NATO members with speedier and more up-to-date information on American actions in South Viet Nam.

NDP Proposes Special Role For Quebec

New Code Proposed At Parley

TORONTO (CP) — The New Democratic Party voted Tuesday in favor of a Canadian advertising code to supervise all advertising under federal jurisdiction.

The party's third federal convention approved with little debate a resolution that included a proposal for a code, and said an NDP government would not permit companies to deduct "unreasonable amounts" from their taxable income for promotional purposes.

PRICES BOARD

The resolution on protection of the consumer also said an NDP government would set up a prices board to prevent unjustified price increases by large corporations.

There would be strict laws to require the clear marking of quality and size on packages, forced disclosure of interest rates and a federal department of consumer affairs.

TIGHTER CONTROLS

Among other resolutions approved by the convention Tuesday was one calling for tighter controls to guard the interests of the consumer, and another condemning the government's immigration policies.

The immigration resolution was prompted by the government's announcement that skilled workers will be encouraged to come to Canada. It says many of the 400,000 unemployed workers in Canada already possess the necessary skills to fill vacancies.

A 7.4 brown trout caught on a Crocodile spoon in the Cowichan River places Bob Daykin, 33 Lurline, in top place in the King Fisherman Contest river trout division (other than steelhead or rainbow) and in line for a gold Prince Button for July.

His big brown ate a 5.10 brown trout, also from the Cowichan, landed in May by Clare Mitchell of Sidney.

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill's last home, where he died in January, is expected to bring between $240,000 and $300,000 at auction in October.

The eight-bedroom house at 28 Hyde Park Gate has three reception rooms, five bath-rooms and a garden.

Churchill acquired the house during the Second World War.

He bought the adjoining house for his staff. Both are in a quiet dead-end street in fashionable Kensington, just south of Hyde Park.

For the first time, the public can get some idea of what the historic residence was like inside. Photographs displayed by the real estate firm handling the sale show a splendid house that has been made into a home of style and comfort.

LOOKS RESTFUL

The library looks quiet and restful, with the reading lamp still standing behind Churchill's favorite chair on the right of the fireplace.

The library shelves on either side of the tall window are lined with beautifully bound books.

Among them are first editions of the 40 books Churchill wrote during his lifetime. There are vases of flowers on two occasional tables, one of them just in front of the window. The photographs also contain small, intimate reminders of Churchill's occupancy. Two places are still set at the surprisingly small dining table. In two corners of the room are the china elephants given to Churchill by his friend Aristotle Onassis, the Greek shipping magnate.

Lady Churchill's bedroom is quietly elegant. There are fine paintings on the wall. Books overflow from the shelves to the fireplace. Beside the bed is a reading lamp.

Wee Folks—and Dogs

By CHARLES LA VERTU

Admirers of the different can find it with little trouble in Victoria—for example, a village of people six inches tall, or a theatrical troupe of pedigreed dogs.

The Land of Little People recently moved to 340 Gorge Road, is a half-acre miniature village and countryside built to the scale of one inch to the foot.

The other attraction calls itself the world's only pedigreed dog act of Scottish terriers, West Highland white terriers and old English mastiff.

They form part of the Heatherelle Troupe, which entertains daily in the Heatherelle Outdoor Dog Theatre, 4551 West Saanich Road.

A bird's-eye view of the Land of Little People shows the visitor a piece of Canadian countryside in miniature.

Visible are all the modern conveniences—a suspension bridge, modern yachts, foreign cars, a country club with swimming pool, and a golf club.

Also featured are customary features of any Canadian village such as a bank, barber shop, beauty salon, general store, firehall, post office, school and a church.

Brainchild of Thomas Karr, the Land of Little People was five years in the building.

Mr. Karr explained the layout is always changing as new buildings are added and others relocated.

There are 40,000 flowering plants and shrubs now, he said.

"What we are trying to do is to take a piece of Canadian countryside and reproduce it one inch to the foot."

"It is not fantasy, but reality in miniature," he added.

Forty dogs, ranging from 10 weeks to 16 years old, prance four times a day on stage at the dog theatre during July and August.

Owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Mellish, the pups have appeared on both Canadian and American television as well as in leading fairs and celebrations in both countries.

This is the fifth year the troupe spends the summer in Victoria.

Dressed in their finest finery, the pups prance around in a Surrey with a fringe on top, pedal away on a tricycle built for two and dance to the music of Swan Lake.

Illuminated skipping and fun on the merry-go-round and the ferris wheel give the production a circus atmosphere, augmented by dogs walking a 1½-inch bar, soccer races and clowning.

"They are fully at home in front of TV cameras, on stage, or surrounded by kiddies," said Mrs. Mellish.

She explained this was the 33th year the troupe had been in operation.

"Every year we get offers to work across the country and the States, but we prefer to stay at home here."

"The shows can't be early enough. They just love to work," she added.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the House of Representatives has its way, all members of the U.S. Congress will be furnished with automatic letter-openers and letter-sealing machines. The House passed a bill to do this Monday and sent it to the Senate.

The government claims the money for income tax and for tax penalties it days are owed by Moriarty.

Revenue Zero In on Millions

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—A federal judge has narrowed the field of claimants for "Moriarty's millions" to the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and Hudson County.

In a brief opinion filed Monday, Judge James A. Conlanan wiped out all other claims for the more than $2,400,000 in cash that both the IRS and the county had "clear authoritative claims" to the money, that the other claimants did not. He dismissed claims by the state of New Jersey, Jersey City, the garage owners and the workers who found the cash.

The money was found in July, 1962, in the trunk of a car in a Jersey City garage.

Today

Gas Inquiry Nearly Over

By IAN SMITH

The lengthy royal commission on gasoline prices is expected to be concluded today.

Commission counsel H. B. King is expected to finish summing up 18 months of hearings before Judge Charles Morrow.

Mr. King began his summation Tuesday, and his lengthy statement was graphic testimony to the job that faces Judge Morrow as he seeks to provide conclusions about the state of the B.C. gasoline industry.

Speaking in a dry monotone, Mr. King presented a picture of the conflict, innuendo and uncertainty that has marked the hearings since they were sparked by MLA Cyril Sheldford more than a year ago.

But some general patterns are beginning to establish themselves.

On one side stand the various consumer groups, claiming unjustified price differences and too many service stations and a lack of free enterprise.

On the opposite side are statements by various gasoline company representatives, who seek to prove that nothing is certain in the gasoline business and that there is no real way to assess prices.

Some facts are certain: that it took from 1950 to 1962 when Mr. Sheldford first started objecting in the legislature for the Vancouver gas price war to spread to other parts of the province, and that dealers have relatively little control over price of gasoline, and that some buyers get gasoline at a cheaper rate than others—for cost reason.

Mr. King, meanwhile, denied allegations by Mr. Sheldford that gasoline companies deliberately withheld useful information from the hearings.

"We have had full co-operation from the oil companies," he said. "Anything we do not have is probably because we asked the wrong questions."

Garden Notes

Novice on the Rocks

By M. V. CHEESEMAN

When a novice gardener plans her first rock garden, it seems to me that first choice of plants should be given to the easy, free-flowering kinds which will provide plenty of color over the longest period of the growing season. These "easy doers" should form the foundation of our planting scheme, after which we can indulge our fancies and try our hand at growing some of the fussier and rarer alpines.

There are lots of these easy-to-grow plants to choose from, but it is important not to go overboard on any particular kind. For instance, no plants are more colorful early in the season than the dwarf creeping phlox, but if you plant too many, you'll get one terrific splash of color for a few short weeks, and nothing at all but the mat of green leaves for the rest of the season. The trick here is to mix 'em up, so that as one group of plants is passing out of bloom, another is just starting.

These Phlox subulata plants look best, I think, when trained to drape themselves over a vertical rock face, and they are particularly effective for planting in the cracks of an old rock wall. Some of my favorites are Tern-iskam, with dark red flowers; Autumn Rose in a deep rosy pink shade; Lila in mauve-purple, and a fine clean white variety, the name of which I have long since forgotten.

Prostrate, creeping phlox enjoys a rather gritty loam soil in full sun. I prepare special pockets in the rock garden for them, using a mixture of two parts good garden top soil, one part peat moss and one part rather coarse, gritty sand. I shear the plants back hard after flowering and dump a good handful of the same gritty mixture into the heart of each clump. This will often induce a second flush of bloom later in the season.

A good companion for the creeping phlox is Alyssum saxatile, a perennial relative of the fragrant white Sweet Alyssum we use for edging our beds and annuals. It bears brilliant golden yellow flowers, blooming the same time as the phlox.

For sheer brilliance of color, there are few among the easier rock garden plants to compare with the sun-loving Helianthemum or Sun Rose. These plants too benefit from cutting back after the first flush of bloom, with a topdressing of gritty loam. Of the many fine varieties available, I have a special affection for Helianthemum alpestre, with yellow and white blossoms about an inch across.

No rock garden can be considered properly dressed without a few colonies of Thyme, and of the dozen-odd varieties grown hereabouts, I like the one called Mother-of-Thyme, a hairy-leaved kind with pungent, aromatic foliage making a solid mass of tiny pink flowers in midsummer. Plant in a small crack in the rock, using gritty soil again, and allow the hair-like stems to creep across the rock face.

The toughest little commando of the lot is the Carpathian Bellflower, Campanula carpatica, with blue or white blooms. I have quite a lot of this plant in my garden and it keeps popping up in all kinds of unexpected places. One self-sown seedling, for instance, seems to be quite happy in a dimple in the top of a tough old rock where I'll swear there is less than half a cupful of soil!

ART BUCHWALD Brings Pamphlet to Life

Je Suis un Canadien

I didn't think things were really too bad between the United States and France until someone sent me a pamphlet from the French Tourist Office which is being distributed in Canada. One of the chapters is titled, "How To Be a Canadian in France, or How To Avoid Being Mistaken For an American or an Englishman."

It starts, "Although some 90,000 Canadians visit France every year, the average Frenchman is still unable to distinguish a Canadian at first sight, as he can with several other nationalities."

"Most Canadians welcome this chance to be anonymous; but many would like to avoid being mistaken for an American or an Englishman, the two most obvious 'faux pas.' Here are our suggestions:

"When a Frenchman asks you, 'Vous êtes Américain?' he ready to dart back with, 'Non, monsieur. Je suis Canadien.' This will probably produce a smile and maybe a reference to some wartime experience when Canadian soldiers fought on French soil.

"To avoid being mistaken for an American do not over-patronize hot dog stands, American bars, and the few American-type drug stores that are to be found in Paris.

"Do not rely exclusively on the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune for your news. Don't dress or act like a Texan.

"Just be yourself. Then you can't go wrong."

The scene is Paris and a Frenchman sidles up to a tourist. "Vous êtes Américain?"

"Non, monsieur," the tourist darts back. "Je suis Canadien."

The Frenchman smiles. "Would you like to buy some saucy pictures?"

"No, thank you," the tourist says.

"Ah, you Canadians are so different from your American and English cousins! You are only interested in the finer things."

"I remember during the war we had a Canadian soldier who stayed with us. He fell in love with my daughter and he gave her chocolate bars and nylons and cigarettes and he was one of the family. He wasn't like those American GI's who were always out to get something."

"What happened to him?" the tourist asks.

"My daughter became enclined, so he went back to Canada. We never did find out his last name."

"That's nice. By the way, could you give me the name of a Canadian snack bar. I'm dying for a good Canadian hamburger and a Canadian malted milk."

"Alors, there are none. The Americans have taken over all the snack bars and drug stores. Would you be interested in going to a night club in Pigalle that caters strictly to Canadians? Even the girls wear maple leaves."

"No, thank you, but I'm dying to read a newspaper."

"It is a problem," the Frenchman says. "If anyone sees you reading the New York Herald Tribune there is no telling what they would do. Would you like to see a movie that you may never see in Canada?"

"I don't believe so. I was thinking of going to the Louvre."

"With all those Americans? Monsieur, we French and Canadians must stick together. Come with me and I'll introduce you to a very lovely girl."

"I can't. I only have American Express travellers cheques."

"It makes no difference, monsieur. We are not that narrow-minded yet."

New Film for Beatles

By SHIKILAN GRAHAM

LONDON (NANA)—Number Three film for The Beatles: A Hard Day's Night, formerly owned by Laurence Harvey. Production is to begin at the end of the year. I asked Ringo in London whether his fat man had fallen off since his marriage and expectant fatherhood. "If anything, there's more," he replied. "Everyone's congratulating me."

Paul McCartney is still showing the marks in his neck where a little girl in Nice during the recent tour dug her nails in, long and hard. Paul yelled for rescue, and it took two gendarmes to pull off his admirer.

I asked Jack Lemmon, "Don't you sometimes wish that you could go sightseeing like the ordinary tourists?" "We will," he replied, "when this is all over." I didn't like to ask him when he thought that would be . . .

The stork had apparently cancelled his date with Kim Novak and her husband Richard Johnson. She was definitely pregnant in Spain at the San Sebastian film festival and had great difficulty in keeping her appointments. Anyway, her Day of the Arrow is back on schedule. But Richard, who believed the picture was cancelled, signed for Kharoum, leaving his spot wide open for David Niven. The film starts in August in London, which is why David accepted the assignment. He loves living at the Connaught Hotel there. It's quiet, genteel and has the best food in town.

Otto Preminger in London told me that he will give the first preview of his Bunny Lake Is Missing picture in the new plus projection room he is putting into his town house in New York.

Nanette Fabray's stepdaughter, Laurie MacDougall, is getting married, and I hear that the lucky lad is the author of How To Be a Jewish Mother, very much on the best seller lists. And what's this about a break up with Judy Garland and her supposedly best boy friend, Mark Herron? And, while we are a bit out of touch, wasn't Natalie Wood supposed to marry that Bismarck fellow in June? Here it is July and as yet, no nuptials.

The trickiest sale I have run into is the midsummer advance sale. A sale in advance of fall.

The store advertises: "In order to get these fall hats at a reduced price, you had to buy them before the fall season. We are therefore able to reduce them BEFORE the fall season. In the fall they will go UP."

That is horse trading that defies imagination.

On TV, the Good Guys wear the white hats. The Bad Guys wear the black hats. As easy as that.

But in the buyer's world, they sell us hats—white and black—

Good Guys Wear The White Hats

Plenty of sales these mad mid-summer days! "Everything Must Go!" — says the ad. "Half Off!"

This is one of the mysteries of free enterprise. How can a store sell pants at full price one day and at half off the next? And stay in business?

Sales are another way of stimulating economy. And so many things go on sale that it seems we must look on the original asking price as a little joke on the part of the seller.

Words of Wisdom

SYDNEY HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: The hardest thing in the world to know is whether one's demand for "justice" on behalf of oneself is not a demand however cunningly rationalized for injustice toward somebody else.

All the charming contradictions in the feminine nature can be summed up in the fact that nearly every woman wants a man who is strong enough to be leaned upon and weak enough to be controlled.

Two of the most commonly misused words are not long ones, but the shortest ones possible: "eke" and "lik," both used improperly in such sentences as "he ekes out a living," and "people of that ilk."

My own test of a mechanically-minded person is whether he can refold a travel map correctly on the first try.

People who fish for free professional advice at dinner parties ought to keep in mind one of the oldest, and sagest, of English proverbs: "A lawyer's opinion is worth nothing unless paid for."

Styles in faces—odd as that phrase may seem—change as much as, if more slowly than, styles in dress: gaze at the faces in a group picture of 20 years ago, and the very expressions seem to date the subjects.

No creature is as socially vexing as the woman with a smattering of psychiatric information—she thinks she is probing into your heart when she is only deep enough to get under your skin.

After a quarter-hour, all Straus waltzes sound alike; nothing bores so quickly as music that is merely melodic with a heavy beat—it appeals chiefly to those who want a composer to assault the emotions rather than exalt them.

A husband is a man who assures his mate that she is unlikely any other woman he has ever known, and when she begins to believe this, proceeds to treat her like every other woman he has ever known.

Tea Brews Storm

BARROW - IN - FURNESS, England (Reuters)—One hundred and five men working on Britain's Polaris submarines here decided to quit their jobs Tuesday because of restrictions on tea-making.

They were among 200 men who had protested because the shipyard firm cut off a hot water supply used by the workers to make tea.

The company claimed tea-making wasted too much time and said the men had to bring their tea to work in flasks.

Amateur Director Goes Professional

By DENNIS ORCHARD

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Tom Kerr is investing a weighty reputation in summer stock.

He is trying on six weeks of professional theatre in Vancouver to prove some points established in six remarkable years directing non-professional theatre here.

The 34-year-old teacher has been a kind of hinterland pied piper for young people in British Columbia since he left Glasgow 15 years ago. Greater Kamloops will be the third community he has left with a vibrant tradition in drama and with a large group of students gripped by a special kind of inspiration.

TOP DIRECTOR

His North Kamloops PTA group, a mixture of students and young adults, produces the best non-professional theatre fare in the province. In 1964 they went to the Dominion Drama Festival with Arnold Wesker's Chips with Everything, and Kerr was named the festival's top director.

As a fellow of Trinity College, London, his academic qualifications in speech and drama are the highest attainable anywhere. He has taught both subjects at five schools here.

But he never got around to getting a BA. He and Norma

Phones To Be Fixed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cyrus McLean, 65-year-old chairman of the British Columbia Telephone Company, leaves this weekend for Santo Domingo to organize repairs to the Dominican Republic's shattered communications system.

Mr. McLean was caught in the middle of the Caribbean nation's revolution on his last trip in April. He said Tuesday considerable damage had been done to his company's holdings.

He is also president of the Compania Dominicana de Telefonos, the Dominican counterpart to B.C. Telephone.

FIGHTING OVER

"He said he has been assured fighting will be over by the end of the week and that he will be safe in the battle-scarred capital.

"But I'd just as soon wait until it's all over."

Mr. McLean and his wife were caught in the midst of fighting that broke out April 24. They were evacuated by the U.S. Navy after dodging bullets.

The company's headquarters are in a mile-square area still held by the rebels and Mr. McLean said damage to the building and its communications centre has been heavy.

Willie Mays Sparks Nationals To All-Star 'Rubber' Triumph

By JACK HAND

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Willie Mays was hurting so much Tuesday all he could do was hit a lead-off home run in the first inning, walk twice and score the winning run for the National League in a 6-5 all-star game victory over the American League.

Mays still carried a painful bruise on his right hip—a souvenir of a home plate collision at Philadelphia Saturday night—but he went hitlessly on, strewing records along the way.

NATIONALS LEAD

With the help of Mays, San Francisco Giants, teammate Juan Marichal, and a host of others the National League finally took the lead in the mid-season series 18-17-1. At one stage the American League held a 12-4 edge and the National wanted to call the whole thing off.

Mays, in the unusual role of a lead-off man, opened the game with a homer. Joe Torre of Milwaukee followed a single by Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh with a two-run homer, in the first inning. Stargell opened up a 5-0 lead with a two-run homer in the second.

MAYBE 15-2?

"I thought for awhile we were going to win 15-0," said National League manager Gene Mauch of Philadelphia.

The stunned capacity crowd of 46,706, seeing its first all-star game at Metropolitan Stadium, was beginning to wonder what strange brand of Giants performed in the National League before the American League struck back.

THE SCORE

One run in the fourth and a big four in the fifth on a pair of booming two-run homers by Dick McAuliffe of Detroit and Harmon Killebrew, the home town hero of the league-leading Twins, tied the score.

After this long-range bombing, it was ironic that a scratch single by Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs finally provided the Nationals with their 6-5 victory over the Americans took it right down to the wire and threw a score into the Nationals when Tony Oliva of the Twins opened the ninth with a double off Bob Gibson of St. Louis. However, Max Alvis of Cleveland popped up trying to bunt, Gibson, the world series hero last fall, then struck out Killebrew and pinch hitter Joe Pepitone of the New York Yankees.

Baseball in the Ear Not What It Seems

By JIM MURRAY

The accepted way to cover a sport event is spikes-high, stiff-arm-out, pencil poised, don't take "no comment" for an answer, then write it straight, keep it in five graphs, double-spaced, full of direct quotes. It's meat-and-potatoes journalism.

A pitcher gets clobbered for a game-winning home run, for instance, and you check your insurance, make one phone call to your home and your lawyer, and hot-foot it down to the locker room to say, "OK, Don, it was the pitch and why didn't you walk him?"

Drysdale glares at you and, if he doesn't swing, snarls: "The pitch was a good one, you hack so-and-so, and nine times out of nine, the big stiff couldn't hit it with a carpet beater, and the reason I didn't walk him is I'm stupid and I don't realize it's only that well-known home and sure out, Willie Mays, coming up next. Any other questions?"

Next, you go down in the dressing room as the hometown palooka is putting a piece of steakbeef on the eye that was turning purple even before he got knocked out and you say, "OK, one-punch, why didn't you duck?" A moment later, you're ducking. But you've got your story.

They don't do things that way down in Washington. They've got a nice leisurely ivory tone, not soapy soapy, type of journalism down there that I envy. Everything is done through "spokesmen," "administration sources," "sources close to the White House." That sort of thing. Everybody has a press secretary including the press secretary. The possibilities for boudoiring the issue are infinite. It's a nice, safe way to discharge your business.

THROUGH CHANNELS

A black eye would have to be handed down through channels. You get to smoke a pipe and pick up your stories at the National Press Club not the whitewash bath. I wish baseball—or boating or football—would adopt it. I mean, you can't quote the president of the United States directly, why should you be able to quote Walt Alston?

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

"The worst fishing in 40 years," was the discouraging information we got from a veteran fisherman when we cruised into Active Pass waters Friday. But not too long afterwards we had seven coho in the boat and they were still biting.

We went to Active Pass with Charlie White, who used to operate a charter fishing boat and knows these waters like the back of his hand.

It took us just 30 minutes to reach Active Pass, about 15 miles from Clark Bros. Marine in Roberts Bay, in White's 25 foot outboard cruiser, Minotaur. Another 10 minutes and we were through the pass jiggling herring.

There are many places to fish around Active Pass, but in the pass itself it is very difficult because the ferries make it splash about, explained White.

Active Pass is between Galiano and Mayne Islands and further north is Porteau Pass between Galiano and Valdes Islands.

Porteau Pass fishing comes in earlier than Active, around May, explained White. Active, he says, is usually good for fishing in late June, early July and in August.

As we approached Active Pass at the southwestern entrance on Mayne Island is Helen Point. There is an eddy there that is a favorite spot on an ebb tide, said White. Fish just on the inside on a flood tide. This is the spot to fish coho when it is rough on the outside, he explained, and advised using Strip-Tasers and four to 12 ounces of weight... regular Teasers for springs and Super-Teasers for coho.

As we entered the pass we saw what White meant about the ferries. Two ferries had met and turned sharply, the wake from one setting up a five-foot vertical wall of waves in the tide.

"I have never seen the wash so steep," exclaimed White. The tide was at its peak of about 5.8 knots, not the proper time for small boats to venture through the pass.

On our right (south) was Miners Bay, marked by an Indian Village, and White said this can be a hot spot for springs at dusk.

Ahead of us, at the entrance to Active Pass on the Mayne Island side, across from Sturdies Bay on Galiano and inside the Georgina Point light on Mayne Island, a sleek fishing fleet was working a big back eddy.

The point is said to be a good spot for springs on flood tides but our objective was herring jiggling tides but our objective was herring jiggling on the slack tide.

A herring jig is simply some small hooks on short leaders and made into flies with fluorescent yellow, green and red wool. White uses eight hooks on light four or five-inch leaders, but strong main lines because some times a big lingcod will take a herring from the jig. A 12-ounce or one-pound weight completes the outfit.

We jiggled herring . . . eight to 10 inches . . . in the big smooth water of the eddy. White said you only get herring at the peak of high velocity floods to about half-way through the flood when the tide forms the eddy. It doesn't form on real small tides.

In the fall, herring can be jiggled off Bold Bluff in Sansum Narrows, but they are deep, 100 feet or more. At Active Pass we found them almost on the surface and down to the 30-foot level.

White uses frozen strip and he also cuts his strip from fresh herring . . . the right side of the herring for ordinary strip and the left side for super strip. "Fresh herring strip really works, but it is hard to cut," White explained, and we saw how it shrank to two-thirds its size almost immediately after cutting.

"You must have the action . . . a curl and a snap," he explained. "Trim the strip to get it to curl around the end of the hook when it spins. Watch the tail. If it goes in a tight 'w' I don't like it. The trailing edge should go in a tight 'w' curl that is much smaller than the head." To get the action he pulls his hook tight against the Teaser bubble and then bends it outwards.

White is continually checking his tackle and action of his lures.

He uses 10-pound test leaders and never uses a flasher, although he admits at times they can be very effective. "It is far more fun to catch them without a flasher," he says.

We started fishing at the belibouy off the end of Gossip Island, off the tip of Galiano, which is best on the ebb tide, but which we decided to try on the flood because nothing seemed to be doing at the back eddy or anywhere else. We fished two, four and six ounces, 25 feet from the lure and another 40 pulls from the rod tip.

We fished north along Gossip Island to Lion Island, a small island off the outside of Galiano, so named because of a rock that looks like a lion.

White believes off Lion Island is the most consistent spot to get fish in the Active Pass area. His charter parties, once played 180 salmon in a three-day period in those waters.

"Here between Gossip and Lion you can get fish on both flood and ebb tides," he said. "It is the only consistent spot to get them on both tides."

He proved his point. We got our first fish about 2:30 p.m. on the minor solunar and got a fish every 15 minutes to half hour thereafter. Super Strip-Teaser, two and four ounces of weight and both fresh and frozen strip did the trick.

"I like to fish with the tide, not against it. You cover more water that way. I like the small tides because the fish seem to bite better," he said.

I can see it now. The manager goes out to the mound in a tight situation. Now, ordinarily, since this mound conference is followed by a hit battern and a home run in that order, your play would simply be to phone down the dugout and say, "OK, Lefty, what happened? Begin with whom you went to the mound."

But this is Washington and you quickly discover this is a matter of "high level policy." "It's a defense matter," the manager's press secretary tells you. "Check with the people over at defense."

GAME IS ON

This, of course, immediately alerts the pundits. The game is on. It is well-recognized around the Press Club bar and at Georgetown dinner parties that the defense department's first line of defense is the administration. Pensiles are sharpened all over Washington.

Huntley, Brinkley, Arthur Krock, U.S. News and World Report all get in the act. The National Press Club hints darkly at "managed news." The New York Daily News asks editorially: "Is this another 'Baker-Baker case'?" Fulton Lewis is in a snit. Senator Dirksen weeps. Hubert Humphrey grins.

Here is how the story would unfold if baseball were covered like Washington:

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 3—The defense department today issued a "white paper" defining the chief executive.

Pearson

A Complete Humbug!

WASHINGTON, July 4—Columnist Drew Pearson today labeled a "complete humbug" the administration's explanation of the incident on the mound last Friday night. "It is not generally known," Pearson wrote, "and it will be hotly denied but I have it on an unimpeachable authority (note to subscribers on the wire: his barber) that the chief executive gave direct orders to his field commander, Lefty Hook, that the chief executive's orders to bomb the target, in this case, the batter's ear. In fact, the column is able to bring you a direct quote. It can now be revealed that the manager's direct words were 'Stick it in his ear!'" And this at a time when we are doing everything possible to improve our image abroad.

Just Beer, Enchiladas

No Directives Issued

WASHINGTON, July 4—An executive department today in the face of widespread rumors that the Chief Executive initiated aggressive action against the enemy in last Friday night's encounter at the stadium. A prepared statement was read by the press secretary's press secretary. "The Chief Executive met at noon today, had prune juice, an alka-seltzer, a hooker of scotch, two hours and an enchilada. He met with a delegation from the owner who gave him a vote of confidence written on the back of a plane ticket home."

The press secretary's press secretary then asked, "Are there any questions?" May Craig rose to ask if reports were true the chief executive had ordered sanctuary targets bombed—like Swat's Mulligan's ear. The press secretary replied: "The Chief Executive has empowered me to say for publication that 'there were no specific directives issued.'

The man from the Ladies' Home Journal rose to ask, "What was the general discussion into the continuing dialogue?" The press secretary's ditto replied, "You understand you are not permitted to quote the C. E. directly but for your background, what was said was, 'Don't walk him but don't give him nuthin' good to hit neither.'

"As you can see, gentlemen, this gave our man in the field a good deal of leeway. We can only conclude that hitting the target in the ear was a navigational error."

FBI Tracks Down Second Baseman

WASHINGTON, July 5—In a copyright story, The Washington Post today announced a severe security leak in the administration resulted in the information that the home run ball hit in the stadium Friday was a high slider. The FBI, tracing the source of the leak, said it was a high administration source. The post can now reveal the source was the second baseman who was a high source because he had been drinking since dinner.

He is believed to have revealed his information to an out-of-town newsmen who quoted him as describing the pitch thusly: "It was a high slider. My daughter could have hit it. Lefty lost his fast ball along the third inning because he only got about 2½ hours sleep last night. He wouldn't have gotten that except his car hit a pole as he was on his way to an after-hours joint. The FBI said the second baseman had the highest security clearance."

Chet and David

An Editorial

Whither Baseball?

WASHINGTON, July 5—Editorial reaction to the disclosures of the escalated conflict in the American League as a result of what some tools to be government blunders took several forms: Walter Lippmann pointed out that somewhat the same thing happened in the Spanish-American war, also in the Gadsden Purchase. He noted he did not consider Mumbies McGraw a first class chief executive but rather in the Rutherford B. Hayes bracket. David Lawrence blamed the Left Wing but it was pointed out to him the right side of the infield was responsible for the security leak. The Daughters of the American Revolution called the Chief Executive's policy of "don't walk him but don't pitch to him" vacillating and an insult to the American people.

A Gallup poll found five percent of the people thought the manager damaged our image aboard, five percent thought baseball should be outlawed and 90 percent didn't give a damn.

Golf's Big Guns Primed to Fire

TORONTO (CP)—Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus arrived Tuesday at the Mississauga club for the Canadian Open golf championship and aroused considerable excitement.

When the pair arrived from the airport the crowd converged in front of the clubhouse.

Palmer managed to escape quickly and was whisked inside. Nicklaus was solidly ringed but finally struggled through and made the locker room.

There was a repeat performance when they emerged later for a practice round for the tournament which begins today.

Swarms of youngsters settled on Palmer for autographs and he good-naturedly signed books and scraps of paper as he made his way to the first tee.

The crowd around the tee and lining the first fairway were estimated at close to 5,000.

Everybody else was forgotten. Even Toronto's own George Knudson, who just might be the second man to win Canada's title in modern-day golf, strolled about all by himself.

USED OWN PLANES

As usual, Palmer and Nicklaus arrived at the airport in their own piloted planes, Palmer from Latrobe, Pa., and Nicklaus from Columbus, Ohio.

At the clubhouse Nicklaus said he was "just going to hit a few to get rid of the plane ride." Palmer vetoed this and suggested a full round. Nicklaus agreed.

Someone told Nicklaus Mississauga's greens are comparatively small.

SMALL GREENS MAN

"I grew up on small greens," said Jack. "With big greens the game is being made a putter's game."

Knudson, no stranger to the course, figured that a score of 272, eight under par for the 72-hole distance, will be good enough to win the title.

"The course is as different as day and night compared with what it was two years ago during the CGPA championship," said Knudson.

WELL WATERED

"There was more roll then. Right now it has been well watered and is a bit lush. With the course a par 70 for this tournament, I think even more than 272 can win if we get high winds."

There is a likelihood Knudson will be an absentee when the Canadian Professional Golf Championship is held at Royal Montreal Aug. 12-14. The USPGA championship is being held at the same time at Laurel Valley, Palmer's home course.

NOT DEFINITE

Knudson said he hasn't definitely made up his mind but he has entered the USPGA tournament.

While Palmer and Nicklaus were on the course Knudson was presented with the Canadian Golf Press Association Trophy. He is the first winner of the new trophy from Canadian golf writers and the award was made to Knudson as the outstanding Canadian golfer in 1964.

Knudson had an early practice round Tuesday and shot an even par 70.

Victorians Say Drop P.E.I. Causeway

Federal Bias Charged

As far as many Victorians are concerned, the federal government should drop its plans to construct a causeway between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick and concentrate on Vancouver Island development instead.

Victorians who would comment on the issue came out nine to four in favour of spending any improvement money in this province, according to an informal survey by the Colonist.

DISCRIMINATION

Two others had ambivalent opinions, while four people declined to offer an opinion.

Frank Watson, 219 Inlet, seemed to speak for most Victorians when he said that "I think the federal government is discriminating against us."

"We've got a potential on the north end of this Island that should be opened up; it's very short-sighted of Prime Minister Pearson to spend the money between the two cities."

OPPORTUNITIES

James Nicol, 844 Falaise: "I am in full accord with opening up the north end of Vancouver Island. There are unlimited opportunities there for logging, mining, and tourists."

"They should put a road right around the Island. Let's face it, this is beautiful country."

"The money could be much better spent here."

T. A. Veltch, 68 Lurline: "Vancouver Island is sadly neglected as far as roads are concerned."

POSSIBILITIES

S. J. Kinney, 327 Beechwood, admitted that "I don't know much about Prince Edward Island, but from what I hear there would be much more possibility of development from this money on Vancouver Island."

"I don't think they'd get the same benefit back in Prince Edward Island."

Telephone Service Is Being Restored

Underwater link between Point Roberts and Mayne Island.

Two barges and a tug lifted the cable in the surface to enable repairs but last night it remained out of service and the cause of the loss was still not known.

A LOT OF DELAYS

In Victoria, a telephone company spokesman reported "there has been a lot of delays, naturally" in service between the two cities, but added he hoped additional installation of microwave channels would restore the number of circuits to normal by early today.

Some telephone traffic has been rerouted via Nanaimo during the emergency.

TORONTO (CP) — More than 3,000 employees of De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. voted Monday to give their union executive authority to call a strike.

The workers, members of Local 112 of the United Automobile Workers of America CLC, voted 85 per cent in favor of strike action. No date was set.

A Vancouver natural gas company has come up with a $7,000,000 scheme to bring natural gas to some Island communities by barge, and pipe it to homes.

Duncan and Ladysmith councils were approached Monday at regular meetings, and were asked to lend support to the venture.

Specifically, the two communities were asked to support an application by the company which comes before the Public Utilities Commission in August. John Montgomery, representing Cryogenic Enterprises Ltd., appeared before Duncan council. He said the franchise would cover 12 centres on the mainland and Vancouver Island.

An application has been made to the PUC, and a hearing will be held in August.

Mr. Montgomery requested Duncan council's approval, and a letter of intent for the hearing.

20-YEAR FRANCHISE

He told council Cryogenic would seek a 20-year franchise, whereby the company would install a gas system at no cost to the city, and supply natural gas to the whole area.

The natural gas would be brought to the Island by barge in cold storage, then would be put into storage tanks and vaporized as required into the city's system.

He said in future natural gas could be piped directly from Vancouver, but at the present time it is not economical.

During the first phase of the project, eight tanks would be installed on the Island, and a further four tanks in the second stage.

THREE-MONTH SUPPLY

A three-month supply would be on hand at all times in each area, and under the company's present plan, the natural gas would be available to everyone in the city who wants it.

Mr. Montgomery said the Vancouver plant would be the first in Canada, and if the license is granted by the PUC the project would be completed by September, 1966.

He said the whole project is estimated to cost $7,000,000.

He pointed to the advantage of the city owning its own system. He said hook-up charges would be about $3 a house, and natural gas prices would be comparable to those in Vancouver.

He said men would be employed at the storage area at all times, and service men as required would be available for round-the-clock maintenance services.

Ald. Jim Saunders said "the city would probably prefer to own its own system, if the franchise is approved."

"My only concern is the tearing up of streets. We have just finished considerable work on some of the streets and I'd hate to tear them up again."

Mr. Montgomery said he encountered this problem everywhere, and "if the natural gas lines are installed, the work will be done to the city's satisfaction."

Montreal Docks Paralyzed

Longshoremen Filter Back After Respecting Strikers

MONTREAL (CP) — Longshoremen filtered back to work in the port of Montreal late Tuesday after respecting, for a time, picket lines of grain handlers and maintenance men striking for higher pay.

By Tuesday afternoon, the longshoremen were working 20 ships.

Denis Connor, president of the Shipping Federation of Canada, said the port closed down Monday afternoon when the longshoremen refused to cross the lines. There was "practically nothing doing" Tuesday morning, he said. But by early afternoon "there was a betterment in the situation."

Mr. Connor said he hopes all work gangs will be back today.

Killer Whale Towed to Captivity

Namu Heads South

POR HARDY, B.C. (CP) — Four-ton Namu, the only one of his kind in captivity, is held in a pen 60 by 60 feet, towed by husky deep-water tugs and shepherded by Teds Griffin, owner of the Seattle sea-life emporium, on a little harbor.

Griffin bought Namu from two Canadian fishermen for $1,000.

Whale's 'Immigration' Perplexes Officialdom

By BRUCE LEVETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Take one killer whale floating placidly in its pen and mix thoroughly with government departments and what do you get?

Thoroughly mixed-up government departments.

The killer whale Namu, purchased from two Canadian fishermen for $1,000 by a Seattle aquarium, is under tow in its pen heading for the Washington city.

Just what in inspections, duties or other formalities must be observed before you can take a live whale across an international border?

Says Avery Peterson, consul-general for the United States:

"The whale is a very benevolent beast and, I understand, takes exceptionally good care of its young. However, I don't believe it would come under the Immigration and Naturalization Act."

"However, I work for the state department and there are very jealously guarded jurisdiction lines involved here. I recommend you call the bureau of fisheries in Seattle."

Samuel Hutchinson, director of the bureau of fisheries in Seattle:

"There is little in the regulations about bringing live whales across borders. There are regulations governing the import of certain types and species of fish—such as poison fish or fish capable of inflicting injury on other fish."

"But nobody has asked me this before. We have never been confronted with this problem."

"I'm going to have to read the fine print at the bottom of the regulations."

Canadian authorities washed their hands of the problem.

"They're free to export as far as we're concerned," said Maurice Houghton, fisheries officer. "We have export regulations covering salmon, but..."

A spokesman for the Canadian customs and excise department said "we wouldn't require the whale to be documented."

Mr. Hutchinson said the problem of jurisdiction might be a state one:

"The State of Washington has a sales tax. I don't know whether the owners would be subject to that."

Thompson Returns From Canoe Race

OTTAWA (UPI) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson returned to Ottawa Tuesday from a 173-mile canoe race with two crossed ribs and an idea for a centennial project—a 3,000-mile canoe race from the west to Montreal.

Thompson spent last week as judge and in charge of water safety of the White River festival and modestly admitted taking part in the rescue from drowning of seven of the contestants in the week-long run through rapids of the Saskatchewan.

"HARDLY MOVE!"

The race was from Fort Rocky Mountain House, a settlement founded by the fur traders in 1770, to Edmonton.

"We arrived yesterday," said Thompson. "I can hardly move," he added with a laugh.

The ribs were cracked when the 51-year-old Social credit leader was hit by a canoe in one of the rescue operations.

But Thompson was in rare form. He signed autographs for the press in a new book just out, "Commonsense for Canadians" — a selection of his speeches — rapped the government over the Diefenbaker report and discussed his pet centennial project.

CANOE RACE

His idea — which he says has been virtually accepted by the centennial commission and confederation birthday planners of the provinces — is for a canoe race over the old fur routes from Fort Rocky Mountain House to Montreal. Timed for a grand finale there during the World's Fair.

The race he spent last week in was a pocket-size edition of the centennial race. "It was great," he said.

Site is the size of life itself, a piece of the sun in the shape of a man's head.

Cool Reception: Burning Issue

ST. PAUL, Minn. (CP) — A new $150,000 Town Hall will be built here despite rejection by the town's voters—because the old town hall burned down about two hours after plebiscite results were announced.

The town council Monday night decided to go ahead with the project that a voters rejected Friday.

Mayor Jules Van Brabant said he thinks residents now will accept the idea of a new town hall.

ROMP and fire investigators were investigating the incident.

Secret Police Report Sparks Exchange

Council Meeting Angry

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Bill Rathje said Tuesday a report into suspected criminal activity in the police department will be kept secret, even from council and its representative on the police commission.

The mayor made his announcement at a heated meeting of council, during which he told an angry Ald. Tom Campbell that he did not trust him.

CLOSED MEETING

The Police Commission had a closed meeting Monday night to consider the report of lawyer George Murray.

The mayor said afterward that the report would be sent to Attorney-General Bonner so the commission may have his views on it. Further information had also been requested by the commission.

Ald. Campbell, who earlier this year had demanded an open investigation of the police department, had asked if the report would be made public.

ACCUSATIONS

The mayor said that it would not be because of the danger of libelling some persons named in it. He said it would not be shown to council members, even in private, because of past leaks from in-camera meetings.

He said that Mr. Campbell had misled the public with accusations against the police department that were based on rumor.

The alderman replied that he was "right all down the line."

Mr. Murray reported to the commission on information gathered in a police investigation into the $1,250,000 mutilated money robbery of a CPR warehouse here in February.

"Because of the nature of the commission's terms in ordering the report its contents may well be libellous," he said.

"It would be premature to offer an opinion on whether it should be released until I have had an opportunity to study the contents."

Youngsters Kept Busy at Gallery

Summertime is learning time for 115 Victoria youngsters taking art classes in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Students, from four to 16 years old, learn how to paint, draw, sketch, do block printing, collage and work with paper mache. Session last three weeks.

The Gorge pollution fight may not be over after all. Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis has refused to comment on Saanich plans concerning sewage from the Northridge subdivision, and provincial government officials are still going ahead with plans for a hearing on the issue.

An application by Saanich to dump 35,000 gallons a day of treated effluent into Coquitlum Creek—and thence into the Gorge—was met by heated opposition from residents of Greater Victoria, despite the fact that it was passed by the Pollution Control Board.

A similar application for a 50,000-gallon-a-day discharge from a retarded children's hospital will be withdrawn by the provincial government, however, since a satisfactory solution has been discovered.

PROPOSAL

Public Works Minister Chant said Tuesday that plans now call for the hospital to be hooked up to a sewer in the Tillicum-Maddock area, instead of having the effluent discharge into Coquitlum Creek.

The sewage proposal could cost an estimated $220,000, although Mr. Chant stressed that no one could be sure of costs at this stage.

"It looks like a happy solution to the problem," he commented.

TREATMENT

But Saanich officials were by no means ready to back down from their original stand that the best solution to the Northridge problem would be to treat the sewage and run it into the Gorge.

Reeve Curtis reiterated an earlier statement that "the whole question is being reviewed. I cannot comment at this time."

He had made a similar statement to members of the Portage Inlet and Gorge Waters' Association at council meeting Monday.

MEAT

Soaring meat prices are hitting the pockets of Victoria housewives.

Cooked ham has risen 25 cents a pound (to $1.10) in some meat stores, pork cuts and bacon are generally reported as selling at 20 cents a pound higher than several weeks ago. Beef prices are also affected, but not as much.

SEASONAL

The rises are regarded as partly seasonal due to heavy demand, but wholesalers also point to the growing American market for Canadian meat, which is pushing up bidding.

One wholesale meat firm said prices were five or six cents above last summer's peak, mainly for this reason.

PORK SHORT

The spokesman added that though beef was plentiful at the, slightly higher prices, pork was in short supply.

Manager of one downtown meat store estimated that a housewife was paying 20 cents more for her $2 steak, or receiving a quarter of a pound less if she insisted on paying the same.

BEEF UP

Steaks had gone up from the $1.15-$1.19 range. Porterhouse steak from $1.19 to $1.20 a pound, round steak from 78 to 88 cents. Pork cuts had gone up 10 to 15 cents here, with an average of 63 cents per pound.

Stores said the increases had been building up for five or six weeks, but had accelerated during the last 10 days.

A national survey has predicted that the spiral may not be over, but local outlets are more optimistic and think a peak has been reached.

Aldermen to Explore New Planning Setup

A committee of aldermen was authorized Tuesday to explore thoroughly the possibility of setting up a new city planning department.

"One thing you can be sure of, and that is that planning is not going to end in this city," said Mayor Wilson, announcing that a meeting has been set up for Monday with the firm of Willis and Cunliffe.

AS CONSULTANTS

This could mean that the firm which has hired the three members of the city special projects department following their resignation recently, will be acting in a consultative capacity for the city.

Meanwhile, the discord which has kept City Hall seething for two weeks seemed to have subsided Tuesday, at least temporarily.

The employment of Roderick Clark, city projects leader, and his two assistants, Peter Atkin and Ted Parsons, will be over in a few days.

Council Tuesday ratified its action of last Friday, following an explosive meeting, in accepting the resignations of the project planners.

Mrs. Bernice L. Packford, president of the capital region branch of the Community Planning Association, which has been a leading part in the controversy, told aldermen Tuesday that her organization was still taking a deep interest in the whole issue. She indicated that a brief was being prepared, but that for the moment no further action was contemplated.

"We are vitally concerned in seeing the type of renovation and restoration which has been so valuable to the city carried on. Furthermore, we hope that the services of this team of three men, which has worked so well, can be still available to Victoria," Mrs. Packford said.

Letters on the issue were received from the Association of Women Electors, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and

M. P. Paine.

The letter from Mr. Paine said it was sad to see planning in Victoria come to such a dismal end.

"I don't agree that planning is coming to a dismal end in the city. In fact, I sometimes think we are on the threshold of greater things," said Mayor Wilson.

"Whatever happens, there will be no end of planning—that's for sure," said Ald. Millard Mooney.

"We are vitally concerned in

Residents Help in Wake of Fire

Rent-Free House Provided For Refugee Family of Nine

This morning a family of nine moves into a house at the corner of Oswego and Simcoe. They will live in the house, rent-free, until Aug. 1.

They will be wearing clothes given to them by concerned Victoriaans.

ROOF OVER HEADS

They have no furniture in the house, but it is a roof over their heads.

They are the Melvin Fenners, who were burned out of their home on Toronto Street, Monday.

After the fire they took stock of what they had left.

It was a short stock-taking: $2.75 and the clothes they stood in.

A neighbor, Mrs. R. C. McMillan of 544 Toronto, took them in and gave them a place to stay until they found a new home.

Tuesday, more help came in the form of clothes for seven children and Mr. and Mrs. Fenners.

In addition, came the offer of the house.

"It was wonderful the way people helped us," Mrs. Fenners said Tuesday.

The response was just wonderful. We are getting lots of clothes, but we need furniture.

"We feel so thankful."

Meanwhile, Victoria fire department investigators discovered that Monday's fire was caused by a short circuit in wiring behind refrigerator.

THROUGH WALLS

The blaze, unnoticed by the house's occupants, travelled through the walls then burst loose, and the house was quickly destroyed.

The heat from the Fenners' blaze set two neighboring buildings on fire.

Twenty-four Victoria high school students currently in Quebec will return home Sunday.

The students and their hosts or hostesses will arrive in Vancouver at 5:00 a.m.

Executive director J. E. Dudley of the Canadian Council of Christian and Jewish sponsors of the tour, will be in Victoria today to make arrangements for the return of the students.

Central Saanich centennial committee received a boost

Tuesday night when the municipal council approved in principle the awarding of a 300-foot by 150-foot area in the Wallace Drive park in the event the committee undertakes its own project.

Centennial committee co-chairman W. J. Cockrell had asked council for consideration of a site. He said many projects were being studied but no decision yet made.

100 Years

Father Escaped From U.S.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Olive Green, daughter of an American Negro slave who escaped to Canada and later became a doctor in Scotland, has celebrated her 100th birthday here. At a family gathering were two members of the family who have carried on the tradition started by her father. Olive is a nephew who is a doctor in the United States and another is a nurse there.

Mrs. Green said her father was brought to America from Africa as a slave, escaped to Ohio, then to Canada, and went to England "because a Negro could not get an education in America."

Olive was born in London, England, but when she was six the family moved back to Chatham, Ont., then the terminus of the old underground railway by which Negroes were smuggled out of the U.S. during the Civil War.

Her father, "a missionary at heart," died nine months later of pneumonia caught while he baptised people in the river.

Sjostrom-Bleasdale

Kamloops Wedding of Interest Here

A wedding of interest to Victorians took place recently in North Kamloops when Mary Frances Bleasdale, Victoria, became the bride of Alwyn Armine Sjostrom, also of this city.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry Bleasdale of North Kamloops and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sjostrom, 1015 Fonthwaite Place, Victoria.

Baskets of pink and white carnations and daisies decorated St. George's Anglican Church, North Kamloops, for the ceremony which Canon N. H. Atkinson officiated.

Soloist Mrs. J. Phillips sang "The Wedding Prayer" during the ceremony and Mrs. H. Thorson was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of satins, styled with a full train extending from a bridal bow at the back waistline. Floral appliques centred with crystals highlighted the fitted bodice of the gown. Her veil of silk illusion net misted from a coronet of seed pearls and crystals. Only jewelry was a pearl necklace and earrings. Pink rapture roses, white stephanotis and ivy were in her cascade bouquet.

Empire-line gowns of Egara in pink and blue tones were worn by maid of honor, Miss Helen Connell, Victoria, and bridesmaids, the Misses Mary Treloar, Vancouver, and Marie Dodds, Victoria. They completed their ensembles with picture hats in tone and cascade bouquets of pink gladioli and lilies.

Gerald Sjostrom was best man for his brother. Ushering guests were Barry Sjostrom and Russell Bleasdale, Summerland, B.C. Clare Elsey, Summerland, proposed the toast to the bride for the reception following in the Odd Fellows hall, Kamloops.

A tiered wedding cake, flanked with floral arrangements in pink and white tones, centred the bride's table.

For travelling on a honey-moon trip to Banff and Lake Louise, the new Mrs. Sjostrom chose a powder blue dress and coat ensemble, accented with white accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The couple is making their home in Victoria.

EATON'S

Cyrus Eaton's Wife Believes U.S. Flirting with World War

By R. J. ANDERSON

NORTHFIELD, Ohio (CP) — Anne Eaton makes it clear at the outset. She is not interested in the personality-profile type of interview. She has a message.

She delivers it with intensity —frowning concentration, wagging finger. She spaces her words for emphasis.

The fact that her views coincide with those of her multi-millionaire husband is, she says coincidental. The interviewer is left in no doubt that her conclusions are her own.

The message: The United States is flirting with world war —just now in South Viet Nam; elsewhere, perhaps, tomorrow.

She doesn't like the U.S. state department. She doesn't like the Johnson administration. She particularly doesn't like what she considers the warlike actions of U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara—"that upstart young man."

In different phraseology, that is the word that Cyrus S. Eaton has been preaching, quietly but emphatically, since May 24 when he returned from his latest visit to Europe.

Both say they feel that ideological differences between Russia and China are neither deep-rooted nor irreconcilable. Any-

Anne Eaton

the Eaton home on the "home farm," down the road a bit from the famed Acadia Farm where earlier in the rainy afternoon Mrs. Eaton with equal concentration had kept track of prices paid for her husband's cattle at an auction.

Above the fireplace was a photograph of the 19th-century English naturalist Charles Darwin, on an end table one of a personal friend, the Socialist philosopher Bertrand Russell.

Any suggestion that Eaton, in warning of what he terms certain Russian intervention in Viet Nam, was voicing the Red "line" was denied emphatically but without indignation. His ideas were his own; so were Mrs. Eaton's, gained in several trips with him behind the Iron Curtain.

Forgotten as the vivacious hostess poured tea and expressed her determined opinions was the wheelchair to which she has been confined since suffering an attack of polio in 1946. It hasn't interfered with her many activities such as being co-ordinator of five international Pugwash conferences on science and world affairs sponsored by her husband.

Eaton, 81 and slightly deaf, relies heavily upon his wife in public appearances. She is at his side at a dinner or luncheon or at a press conference where she speaks clearly, concisely and accurately repartee questions that often are searching.

This is almost the only personal topic upon which Mrs. Eaton is willing to talk freely. They were married in 1957. It was the second marriage for both. Her family and hers were close friends for years and she is fond of remarking that she has known Eaton since she was nine years old.

Part of every summer is spent at Eaton's Deep Cove farm at his native Pugwash, N.S., where, as at Northfield, he takes a keen interest in his shorthorn cattle. She gets around the big farm in a motorized cart, similar to a golf cart, and swings deftly without assistance from chair to station wagon.

She is more interested in world affairs. She says it is only "pious presence" that the United States is in Viet Nam to defend the country against communism, that Secretary McNamara is pursuing a policy of war and that President Johnson is treading on dangerous ground.

Mrs. Eaton is a registered Democrat—her family for 150 years has been well known in Ohio for supporting the party—and was a delegate to the Atlantic City convention in 1964 that nominated Johnson. She feels that the president's approach now to foreign affairs isn't what she voted for.

She also had a word of advice for Canada. Paraphrased, it is:

Stand up and tell Washington where to get off. Don't get pulled into a war in Viet Nam.

Barbara Nancy Hindmarch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hindmarch, Duncan, will become the bride of Mr. Robert Carl Doell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Doell, Victoria, at 2 p.m., August 7, in St. Peter's Anglican Church, Duncan. Rev. E. Greenhalgh will officiate at the wedding. Miss Hindmarch attended the University of Victoria and now holds a teaching position in Vancouver.

Mr. Doell is continuing his studies in law at University of British Columbia and is affiliated with the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.—(Miss Hindmarch's photo by Worsley Studio, Duncan)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the woman who wanted to know if the dying can hear what is being said at the bedside brought back some fascinating memories.

Several years ago I was seriously ill. My hospital room was filled with relatives who had come to be with me at "the end." I was aware of everyone who was present and I heard every word that was said. A sister-in-law warned that my mother should not be allowed to raise my children because she didn't have the proper temperament. She added, "I will take the older girl, but I don't want the younger one." In the same breath this sister-in-law said, "And I want her coat."

A few moments later another sister-in-law announced it was dinner time and someone should go for food. She and her husband left and returned with hamburgers, french fries and coffee.

I heard such remarks as "Who wants theirs with onions?" and "Gee, this is lousy coffee." I don't know if it was the smell of the onions or my anger but I suddenly decided I had to live. I am here, 15 years later, to tell the story—and every word of it is true.—STUBBORN SURVIVOR.

Dear Survivor: I received many letters reciting similar experiences but yours was the best.

Dear Ann Landers: In this sophisticated land of ours if you steal a loaf of bread you can go to jail. If you steal somebody's husband—so what? It happens all the time.

I'd like to start a club called "Alienated Wives Anonymous." Under this umbrella dumped wives could band together and picket the homes of husband stealers. They could carry signs which say, "Inside this house lives a home-wrecker."

Even if we didn't get the wrench to lay off we at least would have the satisfaction of embarrassing her and expressing ourselves. This is a lot better than dying inches and crying rivers of tears—alone.

Maybe you'll say the house isn't worth the trouble, but the wife whose husband has been stolen would surely get comfort and strength from such an organization. What do you think of it, Ann?—ALONE.

Dear Alone: Not much. I don't believe a husband can be stolen like a sack of salt.

When a wife loses her husband to another woman you can be reasonably sure he assisted in the burglary.

Dear Ann: You advise parents to tell their children—and early—that they are adopted. Our experience proves you are wrong.

We adopted our son when he was one week old. His mother was an alcoholic at 17 and did not even know who the father was. We gave the boy the best of everything. He graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with honors when he was 20.

He is now 27, married and has two children. Although they live less than 20 minutes away we see them only once every three weeks.

Last Sunday I lost my temper and told him he wasn't a very good son. He replied, "Well, I suppose I should be grateful because you saved me from a terrible life, but somehow I always feel like a stranger in your home."

If we had not told him he was adopted he would not have these feelings. So you see, Ann, you are wrong.—HURT.

Dear Hurt: The relationship between that boy and you was never good or he could not have made such a remark. The knowledge that he was adopted did not produce those hostile feelings. Too many children feel the same way about their natural parents.

QUIET LOCATION

This very well built home is to be sold at a SACRIFICE PRICE because some rooms did not receive the attention they deserved. The house is a 2 story home with 2 bedrooms and a large living room.
A spacious family room, a large kitchen, a large sunroom and a utility room. The use of trees and shrubs has been kept to a minimum to give shade to the LARGE PATIO for outdoor living. A carport with a double garage is attached to the house. A little work and a little paint is all that is needed to make this a home you will be proud to call your own. A great investment in expensive properties in a very desirable location.

Cabinet Reviews Mill

Construction of a $50,000,000 pulp mill in west central B.C. came a step closer Tuesday with the announcement of cabinet approval of an agreement with the Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Co.

Among terms of the renewable 21-year contract to allow the company to harvest 400,000,000 cubic feet of pulpwood a year is an immediate start on construction of the sulphate mill. It is to be built at Houston, B.C. about half way between Smithers and Burns Lake, by December 31, 1971.

WAY CLEARED

Cabinet approval clears the way for the agreement to be signed by Forests Minister Ray Williston and Bulkley Valley officials.

The signing could take place in as little as two weeks provided projected mill financiers, the Bowater Paper interests, approve the agreement terms.

The agreement is based on a compromise solution offered earlier by Mr. Williston after three firms entered overlapping bids for timber rights to feed three proposed mills.

Bulkley Valley's mill was to be at Houston; Macmillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co.'s at Kitimat, and Columbia Cellulose at Prince Rupert.

The compromise offered each firm enough timber to feed its proposed mill but ruled out additional timber rights for possible future expansion.

African Pupils Apply

By GUY STANLEY

Eleven African students have applied to attend the University of Victoria for the next four years under the scholarship program offered by the African student fund. Gary Nixon, fund publicity director, announced Tuesday.

"We have received eight applications from Kenya, two from Uganda and one from Zambia," he said.

"Two students will be selected out of these applications before Aug. 1, and will arrive early in September in time for registration at the university."

APPLICANTS

Most of the applicants, whose ages range between 20 and 25 years, want to become teachers. One wants to be a doctor and one is a civil servant.

Mr. Nixon, who is assistant manager of the Fox Cinema, has been using his theatre facilities to raise money for the African students fund by showing a series of special films on Sundays.

FUND DRIVE

"The fund," he explained, "is a continuing fund. We will be bringing at least two students over every year, and need to keep raising money to continue our program."

At present the fund, which covers living expenses for the students during their stay in Canada, has $1,700, enough for two students for one year. The university administration has waived fees for the students, so that tuition is free.

EXPANSION

Mr. Nixon, however, would like to expand his program to the point where it can finance the stay of as many as four new African students a year.

"Whether or not we can do it depends on public response," he said.

POLISH FILMS

He is planning a summer series of Polish films which will start Sunday with a showing of Canal, a Cannes Film Festival award winner which tells the story of the Warsaw uprising.

Ashes and Diamonds, the story of a clash between pro and anti-Communist factions in post-war Poland, will be screened Aug. 1, and Generation, the story of Polish youth under the Gestapo, will be shown Aug. 15.

Andrzej J. Wajda directed all three films, which were made at the height of the liberal period in Poland, according to Mr. Nixon.

Performances start at 7 and 9 p.m.

CASTLEGAR (CP) — RCMP have warned residents to stay clear of bears wandering about the village, apparently looking for food. Police said they have received numerous complaints of the animals overturning garbage cans.

Hotter War Ahead

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson said Tuesday it is "quite possible" the United States soon will have to make "new and serious decisions" in the expanding war in South Viet Nam.

Johnson said he is also considering expanding the U.S. draft and calling up military reservists, but no decisions have been reached on that score. (See also Page 5.)

"The government is always considering every possibility and every eventuality," the president told a television press conference.

INCREASED AGGRESSION

Johnson said the North Vietnamese had "increased aggression" in the south. This "increased aggression" from the north may require an increased American response on the ground in the south.

U.S. forces will defend their own bases and "they will be available for more active combat," whenever U.S. field commanders decide it necessary, said the president.

DECISION NECESSARY

"It is quite possible that new and serious decisions will be necessary in the near future."

The president also announced that Russia had accepted a U.S. proposal to resume disarmament talks in a 17-country conference at Geneva by July 27.

The U.S. is anxious to maintain workable relations with Russia and considerable prog-

Canadians 'Camp Followers'

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's support of United States intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic has made this country little better than "camp followers" of the U.S., T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday. (See also Page 5.)

Sweden, Yugoslavia and India have developed foreign policies independent of the great powers. Mr. Douglas said, and as a middle power Canada could give leadership to the non-aligned and non-nuclear powers.

Canadian foreign policy should be independent, give greater support to the United Nations by moving away from regional alliances and include a substantial increase in foreign aid.

House Backs Hanging Bill

LONDON (UPI) — The House of Commons early today passed the bill to abolish the death penalty in Britain.

The vote on the bill, sponsored by Labor Party member Sydney Silverman, was 200 to 98. The bill now goes to the House of Lords which has the power to delay its passage into law.

Mrs. Sides breaks down

Forecast: Short Of Wind

SEATTLE (AP) — On the usual press weather bureau teletype printer appeared this advisory Tuesday:

"The new law combining the weather bureau and the coast and geodetic survey went into effect at 0001 EDT this morning. So now if you want to talk about the weather call:

"The Department of commerce

"Environmental science services administration

"Weather bureau forecaster centre

"Federal office building

"And ask for the public service forecaster.

"If you have any breath left, we can discuss the weather . . ."

Postmen Threaten Go-Slow

Ottawa (CP) — Maybe the weather can't slow the mail but low pay to postmen can and will, say many postmen across Canada.

Letter carriers and sorters in Vancouver, Toronto and now Montreal have indicated the federal government must meet demands for a $300 across-the-board annual raise or strikes and postal slowdowns will follow.

War Wife Target Of Vandals, Calls

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Mrs. Jane Sides, 27, said Monday night her life has been threatened by anonymous phone callers since June 8, two days after a newspaper story described a letter she received from her husband, who is reported missing in Viet Nam.

She called police after receiving an anonymous telephone call from a man who said:

"I know you are alone in the house with only a woman and a child. You will not live through the night."

Police told Mrs. Sides they will patrol the area at regular intervals.

Mrs. Sides, wife of Staff Sgt. Richard Sides, said two crude bombs have been thrown at her home. She said one burned off paint on the porch.

She said the callers, sometimes a man and at other times a woman, have said:

"Get out of the neighborhood. Your husband is killing innocent women and children in Viet Nam. We'll kill you if you don't get out of the country."

She said she had kept the threats and bombs secret until now in an effort to prevent her mother, who lives with her, from learning of them. Her son, Richard Jr., is five years old.

Her husband's letter, which touched off the incidents, read in part:

"The bad part is we don't know how long we'll be over here. Maybe one, two, six months. Only God knows . . ."

Mrs. Sides said her paratrooper husband had been reported missing with several members of his 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Vancouver Tie-Up

Grain Handlers' Strike Spreads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike of grain handlers here spread to two more elevator companies Tuesday and threatened an imminent shut down of all grain shipping from Vancouver.

Two companies employing 150 men remained in operation, but the major terminals — Alberta Wheat Pool, United Grain Growers, and Saskatchewan Wheat Pool — were shut down. (See also Page 20.)

An official of Alberta Wheat Pool said that in the event of a general walkout all rail shippers

ments of grain to Vancouver would be immediately suspended. About 65 cars arrive daily when all five terminals are operating.

The dispute is over alleged re-routing of grain originally intended for the Alberta Wheat Pool, where 125 grain handlers have been on strike for five weeks.

Tuesday afternoon 85 workers at United Grain Growers were dismissed for refusing to handle grain they said was transferred from the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Winking Pass at Mars Made by Mariner Today

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mariner IV elapses a historic 228-day 225,000,000-mile voyage to Mars today by trying to obtain the first close pictures of the planet. (See Page 5.)

Before they will turn the present administration out, however, the voters will have to be convinced they have a real alternative to Liberal policies, any bid to defeat the present government — such as Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has promised this fall over the Dorion report — would be "meaningless."

Beatle-Faced Dog Will Avoid Pound

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Stephen Lewis, a 15-year-old boy sporting a Beatle-type haircut with bangs which reach his eyebrows, wears Fayette County dog licence No. 56115.

He will wear the metal tag on his shirt collar until he gets a haircut.

That's the ultimatum from his father, Dr. Ben Lewis, head of the department of philosophy and religion at Transylvania College.

When Stephen refused to shear his locks, Dr. Lewis reached the end of his patience and ordered a dog tag for Stephen as well as tags for his English setter, Seth, and his spitz, Princess.

The license application listed the "dog's" name as Stephen Lewis, his breed as "American beatle" and markings as "boy with bangs."

Murder Hearing Cut Short As Ailing Accused Excused

By GEOFFREY MINISH

Blood from Susan Freschi's dead body was shown to Colwood magistrate's court Tuesday when the preliminary hearing opened of the capital murder charge arising from the 14-year-old American schoolgirl's death.

The hearing, which started in the morning, was cut short in the afternoon by the indisposition of the defendant, David Leonard Robinson, 24, of 324 Old Island Highway.

An adjournment until this morning was granted by Magistrate William Oster after defense council Alan Bigelow informed him Robinson was suffering and needed medical attention.

Robinson, a short, sturdy, blond-haired man, had sat throughout the day's proceedings slouched forward in the prisoner's box staring down at the floor.

OPEN-NECK SHIRT

He wore light khaki casual pants and a white open-neck shirt. A green packet of cigarette tobacco was visible from his shirt breast pocket.

When driven off in an RCMP car after the adjournment, he was clasping his head in his hands.

Hees Says Voters Need Alternative

Tap Best Brains for Tory Ideas

MONTREAL (CP) — Ex-trade minister George Hees, moving ever closer to a political comeback, called Tuesday for creation of a new policy-producing mechanism within the Conservative party.

The new mechanism would channel ideas from the best brains both inside and out of the party into a continuing flow of policy recommendations to the Conservative caucus and leadership.

Armed with such policies, Mr. Hees is convinced the party can oust the present Liberal government and return to power.

Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said in an interview his travels across the country have convinced him Canadians are disappointed with the Pearson government's performance and required, Mr. Hees proposes the Conservatives set up a series of permanent consultative committees to make continuing recommendations to the party — in power or out — on various policy subjects.

These committees would include both active Conservative members — former cabinet ministers could chair some committees — and national leaders not involved in active politics who could submit practical suggestions on government policy within their specific field.

Mr. Hees, who resigned from the Conservative government of the day in 1963 over a policy disagreement with then-prime minister Diefenbaker, said he had discussed his idea with various leaders within private industry and found them anxious to take part in such deliberations.

The hearing, which started in the morning, was cut short in the afternoon by the indisposition of the defendant, David Leonard Robinson, 24, of 324 Old Island Highway.

Russia Wanted to Send 13-Year-Olds

Children's Village Asks Duncan Support

DUNCAN—An official of International Children's Villages has asked for this city's co-operation and support for the forthcoming village to be held at Strathcona Lodge School at Shawnigan Lake.

John Berges, high school teacher from Kitchener, spoke to council Monday.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Norah MacPherson, of Shawnigan Lake, who has been assisting with village organization.

FIRST IDEA

Mr. Berges explained how the idea of International Children's Villages was conceived in 1946.

Until the end of last year, 52 villages had been held throughout the world, and this year 12 will be held with representatives from 35 countries.

SCOTTISH IN CANADA

The village at Shawnigan Lake is the second to be held in Canada. Last year a village was held at Kitchener, and Mr. Berges commended Vancouver Island communities on their enthusiasm and support in organizing the village.

"Vancouver Island has shown tremendous spirit. It took us six years in Kitchener before we decided we were ready to hold a village."

Mr. Berges said 11-year-olds are chosen "because they are at an age before prejudices have developed, and their minds are still open."

The local village will include 32 children from eight countries, eight adult interpreters and four junior counsellors who have attended previous villages.

He said cost of the village will be about $8,000, and he was happy to report the fund drive had been successful.

CHECK RESULTS

Council asked Mr. Berges about results of the villages, and he said the oldest graduates of the villages are now about 25 years old.

"We are just starting to see the results," he said, "but we have noted that about 72 per cent of the graduates have chosen careers in the diplomatic field where they are working in and for other countries."

Mr. Berges said Russia was asked to send children to the villages, "but they insist on sending 13-year-olds and we feel that at this age the child has already started to form definite opinions."

VISIT GARDENS

Most of the children will travel from Victoria by train Thursday morning to the village. Trips are planned to Victoria, Vancouver, Meesachie Lake and Butchart Gardens.

Mr. Berges said local Indians are staging a program of dancing Sunday and he asked for council assistance in having a salmon barbecue.

The request was referred to the finance committee, and Ald. Jim Saunders assured Mr. Berges council will be able to help.

Farm Manager Didn't Mean It

COURTENAY — Ladislav Kansky, manager of the UBC farms at Oyster River, was acquitted in police court Monday of a charge of unlawfully using colored gas.

He was charged when a farm pick-up truck was found to be using a mixture of colored and clear gas.

His lawyer argued when the act was enforced, the purposes of use rather than the prohibition should be examined. He told the court intent is a necessary ingredient and must be proved.

The accused man admitted having a mixture in the tank and said clear gas was added when the truck was taken on the highway, and it was impossible to drain the tank each time.

The magistrate in dismissing the charge agreed that there was no intent to defraud the government and the act must be accepted with a somewhat broad interpretation.

Twin City Buses

Vote Will Decide Subsidy

PORT ALBERNI — Finance committees have been given authority by Twin Cities councils to prepare an agreement covering a franchise and subsidy for Tyee Bus Company Ltd., for the purpose of submitting the matter to the ratemakers.

However, aldermen questioned the principle of municipal subsidies for private enterprise, and others suggested there might be alternative solutions to the financial problems of the transportation company.

Tyee Bus Company suggested revenue from city transit be brought up to 65 cents a mile with the subsidy to be reviewed yearly and to go into effect on August 1.

Ald. Earl Bowes, of Port Alberni, said "I don't oppose the subsidy as such, but I don't think it is the only solution.

"The firm undoubtedly needs some money but whether or not it should be given in the form of a subsidy should be given a study."

Tourists

Help Workers

COURTENAY — Reports from the National Employment Service indicate a high level of employment for the month of June.

Emphasis centred on heavy construction, apartments and private dwellings in the Comox Valley.

With the advent of the tourist season, catering and service establishments sought more employees. The entry of local high school students seeking summer employment has created a surplus of unskilled workers.

There is an acute shortage of workers skilled in logging and construction. Females cooks, tellers, office girls and live-in housekeepers are also in short supply.

End Near for Cumberland School As Demolition Bid Received

COURTENAY — School board has finally received a tender for demolition of Cumberland Elementary School, built in 1898. The board called for tenders three times, and twice received no answer, prompting chairman

Brian Walker to remark, "Even a tender from a termite would be acceptable." At Monday's meeting the tender of $1,000 from Dyke Excavating was accepted, and will be completed in time for school opening this September.

Pony Club Rally First Held West of Rockies

DUNCAN — The 18th annual Canadian National Pony Club Rally will be held at Duncan, July 22 to 25.

This will be the first time the national has been held west of the Rockies. Cowichan branch of the pony club was asked to organize it when chairman of the Canadian advisory council, Mrs. Adele Davis Rockwell, visited Duncan in September and looked over the stabilizing and grounds facilities.

Regional Districts Talk Topic

PORT ALBERNI — Councils of the twin cities are arranging a meeting at which representatives of west coast communities will hear of new legislation covering formation of regional districts.

Involved will be those who showed interest in forming a hospital district prior to the passage of the legislation, which transferred jurisdiction to the department of municipal affairs.

DEPUTY MINISTER

Arranged for July 28 or 30 the meeting will be addressed by assistant deputy minister of municipal affairs J. D. Baird.

Invited to attend besides twin cities councils will be representatives of Ucluelet, Tofino, Bamfield and rural areas of the Alberni Valley.

It was pointed out by Mayor Les Hammer that the hospital plans are an important part of the program involved in a regional district.

The pony club is the junior branch of the British Horse Society with 60,000 members in 22 countries around the world.

Early in 1965 Cowichan branch called a meeting with district commissioner Mrs. H. H. Norcross in the chair to appoint a committee to organize the national rally.

EXECUTIVE
E. P. Robertson, Measchie Lake, was chosen chairman. Stan Green of Duncan was elected vice-president. Mrs. Dorothy Edgerton of Queen Margaret's School, secretary.

Officials of the national rally: Event chairman Mrs. G. B. Barnes; cross country, Miss Barbara Sharp; dressage, Miss Shirley Burr; stadium jumping, W. A. King.

In charge of accommodation for contestants is Mrs. R. McDonald. Cowichan exhibition board is allowing all horses to be stabled at the fair grounds, with use of the show ring.

Peace Group's 'Free Speech' Issue

RCAF Remains Silent

COMOX — Project '67 officials say they held a meeting with an RCAF official, and the peace group members did all the talking.

Bert Vere and Steve Horn met with the base public relations officer and informed him of plans for the group's "teach-in" outside the main gate of the station July 18.

NO COMMENT

But they said when they asked the officer whether men at the base "will again be instructed not to talk to project participants or attend the mass rally in Courtenay July 14," the officer refused to comment.

"This again brings up the question of very basic freedoms of speech," said project leader Peter Light.

OFF-DUTY ISSUE

"We would like to ask the base commander officially if airmen and civilian employees will be allowed to converse freely with us when they are off duty."

He said refusal to answer such a question will be considered as admission "that once again the military are denying a basic right to citizens of this country."

SIX-HOUR SESSION

Project members told the public relations officer the teach-in will begin at 1 p.m. and end at 7 p.m., July 18.

There will be a microphone and loudspeakers, which will carry talk on peace, disarmament, and non-violent resistance.

NANAIMO — Free parking at Departure Bay terminal of the B.C. Ferry Authority will end on Thursday July 15, if fencing of the 587-car parking lot is completed.

After this date motorists will be charged 50 cents for 48 hours of parking, and three girls will be hired to collect the fees.

Piped to Homes

Natural Gas by Barge Offered Duncan, Ladysmith

A Vancouver natural gas company has come up with a $7,000,000 scheme to bring natural gas to some Island communities by barge, and pipe it to homes.

Duncan and Ladysmith councils were approached Monday at regular meetings, and were asked to lend support to the venture.

SUPPORT SOUGHT

Specifically, the two communities were asked to support an application by the company which comes before the Public Utilities Commission in August.

John Montgomery, representing Cryogenic Enterprises Ltd., appeared before Duncan council. He said the franchise would cover 12 centres on the mainland and Vancouver Island.

AUGUST HEARING

An application has been made to the PUC, and a hearing will be held in August.

Mr. Montgomery requested Duncan council's approval, and a letter of intent for the hearing.

20-YEAR FRANCHISE

He told council Cryogenic would seek a 20-year franchise, whereby the company would install a gas system at no cost to the city, and supply natural gas to the whole area.

The natural gas would be brought to the Island by barge in cold storage, then would be put into storage tanks and vaporized as required into the city's system.

He said in future natural gas could be piped directly from Vancouver, but at the present time it is not economical.

During the first phase of the project, eight tanks would be installed on the Island, and a further four tanks in the second stage.

THREE-MONTHS SUPPLY

A three-month supply would be on hand at all times in each area, and under the company's present plan, the natural gas would be available to everyone in the city who wants it.

Mr. Montgomery said the Vancouver plant would be the first in Canada, and if the licence is granted by the PUC the project would be completed by September, 1966.

$7,000,000 PROJECT

He said the whole project is estimated to cost $7,000,000.

He pointed to the advantage of the city owning its own system, whereby the company would install a gas system at no cost to the city, and supply natural gas to the whole area.

He said men would be employed at the storage area at all times, and service men as required would be available for round-the-clock maintenance service.

Ald. Jim Saunders said "the city would probably prefer to own its own system, if the franchise is approved."

STREET WORK

"My only concern is the tearing up of streets. We have just finished considerable work on some of the streets and I'd hate to tear them up again."

Mr. Montgomery said he encountered this problem everywhere, and "if the natural gas lines are installed, the work will be done to the city's satisfaction."

The next step will be calling a plebiscite. He said the hospital committee is trying to get away from the "hospital look" for the chronic hospital, and

Wreckage of Small Dugout Found on West Coast

TOFINO — The wreckage of a small dugout with engine has been found at Chesterman's Beach, six miles from here.

Police believe the dugout belonged to Larry Sport of Bamfield.

They do not know whether he was aboard when it was wrecked. A search for survivors

A search is being made of islands and beaches along the coast, on the theory that the owner may be stranded.

The boat was found Tuesday afternoon.

Hospital One of Best

DUNCAN — According to Health Minister Martin the new $4,000,-

CONTRACT REVIEW

A request from Duncan SPCA to hold a meeting with council in the near future to review the society's contract was approved by council.

The SPCA said the contract between the society and the city has not been reviewed since 1958, and city clerk, Gordon Berry, was asked to arrange a special meeting.

A request from Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, was referred to the traffic committee.

PIERRE BONTE NEXT

The next step will be calling a plebiscite. He said the hospital committee is trying to get away from the "hospital look" for the chronic hospital, and the board decided to retain the present caretaker until the end of August, and in the interval discuss the possibility of some other suitable arrangement for the coming year.

With the acquisition of the former army camp at Sandwick, the matter of a caretaker was discussed.

The board decided to retain the present caretaker until the end of August, and in the interval discuss the possibility of some other suitable arrangement for the coming year.

Section 35 of the act provides the clerk shall prepare annually a list of electors, and such list shall be closed at 5 p.m. of the 30th day of September in each year. The list as now prepared is then revised and certified by the court of revision.

ANSWERS CRITIC

In answer to criticism of the compilation and use of the voters list, Mr. Thain told council, "In order to clarify this matter, I would first point out that the chamber pointed out since recent widening of the Trans-Canada Highway in Duncan, and the installation of curbs and gutters, parking facilities are parallel instead of diagonal.

PARKING CUT

Chamber secretary Art Stevenson said "the 100 feet of parking area in front of the chamber office has been cut in half by the completion of the project, and has produced a parking problem for tourists."

He suggested the area in front of the chamber office be marked for callers at the office only.

SHORTER TIME

Ald. Saunders suggested the two-hour parking zone in front of the chamber bureau be cut to a much shorter time.

"This problem should be dealt with immediately," he said. "The tourist season is here now."

SKATEBOARDS

Use of skateboards in the city was raised at the meeting. Ald. Robert Mason said young-sters are using skateboards on local tennis courts, and signs will be posted at the courts stating the area is "for tennis only."

Acting Mayor Hamish Mutter said the skateboards are being used on many city streets. "This form of recreation is very dangerous," he said. "Inexperienced children wouldn't have a chance with traffic on the streets."

He asked clerk Berry to investigate the situation "with a view to legislation."

Reserves?

Hotter
War Ahead

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson said Tuesday it is "quite possible" the United States soon will have to make "new and serious decisions" in the expanding war in South Viet Nam.

Johnson said he is also considering expanding the U.S. draft and calling up military reservists, but no decisions have been reached on that score. (See also Page 5.)

"The government is always considering every possibility and every eventuality," the president told a television press conference.

INCREASED AGGRESSION

Johnson said the North Vietnamese had "increased aggression" in the south. This "increased aggression from the north may require an increased American response" on the ground in the south.

"U.S. forces will defend their own bases and 'they will be available' for more active combat," whenever U.S. field commanders decide it necessary, said the president.

DECISION NECESSARY

"It is quite possible that new and serious decisions will be necessary in the near future."

The president also announced that Russia had accepted a U.S. proposal to resume disarmament talks in a 17-country conference at Geneva by July 27.

The U.S. is anxious to maintain workable relations with Russia and considerable progress.

'Camp

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's support of United States intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic has made this country little better than "camp followers" of the U.S., T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday. (See also Page 5.)

Sweden, Yugoslavia and India have developed foreign policies independent of the great powers, Mr. Douglas said, and as a middle power Canada could give leadership to the non-aligned and non-nuclear powers.

Canadian foreign policy should be independent, give greater support to the United Nations by moving away from regional alliances and include a substantial increase in foreign aid.

Hanging Bill

LONDON (UPI) — The House of Commons early today passed the bill to abolish the death penalty in Britain.

The vote on the bill, sponsored by Labour Party member Sydney Silverman, was 200 to 96. The bill now goes to the House of Lords which has the power to delay its passage into law.

Mrs. Sides breaks down

War Wife Target Of Vandals, Calls

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Mrs. Jane Sides, 27, said Monday night her life has been threatened by anonymous phone callers since June 9, two days after a newspaper story described a letter she received from her husband, who is reported missing in Viet Nam.

She called police after receiving an anonymous telephone call from a man who said:

"I know you are alone in the house with only a woman and a child. You will not live through the night."

Police told Mrs. Sides they will patrol the area at regular intervals.

Mrs. Sides, wife of Staff Sgt. Richard Sides, said two crude bombs have been thrown at her home. She said one burned off paint on the porch.

She said the callers, sometimes a man and at other times a woman, have said:

"Get out of the neighborhood. Your husband is killing innocent women and children in Viet Nam. We'll kill you if you don't get out of the country."

She said she had kept the threats and bombs secret until now in an effort to prevent her mother, who lives with her, from learning of them. Her son, Richard Jr., is five years old.

Her husband's letter, which touched off the incidents, read in part:

"The bad part is we don't know how long we'll be over here. Maybe one, two, six months. Only God knows..."

Mrs. Sides said her paratrooper husband had been reported missing with several members of his 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Vancouver Tie-Up

Grain Handlers' Strike Spreads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike of grain handlers here spread to two more elevator companies Tuesday and threatened an imminent tieup of all grain shipping from Vancouver.

Two companies employing 150 men remained in operation, but the major terminals — Alberta Wheat Pool, United Grain Growers, and Saskatchewan Wheat Pool — were shut down. (See also Page 20.)

An official of Alberta Wheat Pool said that in the event of a general walkout all rail shipments of grain to Vancouver would be immediately suspended. About 425 cars arrive daily when all five terminals are operating.

The dispute is over alleged re-routing of grain originally intended for the Alberta Wheat Pool, where 125 grain handlers have been on strike for five weeks.

Tuesday afternoon 85 workers at United Grain Growers were dismissed for refusing to handle grain they said was transferred from the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Hees

Tap Best Brains for Tory Ideas

MONTREAL (CP) — Ex-trade minister George Hees, moving ever closer to a political comeback, called Tuesday for creation of a new policy-producing mechanism within the Conservative party.

The new mechanism would channel ideas from the best brains both inside and out of the party into a continuing flow of policy recommendations to the Conservative caucus and leadership.

Armed with such policies, Mr. Hees is convinced the party can outlast the present Liberal government and return to power.

Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said in an interview his travels across the country have convinced him Canadians are disappointed with the Pearson government's performance and

"shocked by the conduct of its members."

Before they will turn the present administration out, however, the voters will have to be convinced they have a real alternative to Liberal policies, any bid to defeat the present government — such as Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has promised this fall over the Dorion report — would be "meaningless."

To get the type of policies required, Mr. Hees proposes the Conservatives set up a series of permanent consultative committees to make continuing recommendations to the party — in power or out — on various policy subjects.

These committees would include both active Conservative members — former cabinet ministers could chair some committees — and national leaders not involved in active politics who could submit practical suggestions on government policy within their specific field.

Mr. Hees, who resigned from the Conservative government of the day in 1963 over a policy disagreement with then-prime minister Diefenbaker, said he had discussed his idea with various leaders within private industry and found them anxious to take part in such deliberations.

The hearing, which started in the morning, was cut short in the afternoon by the indisposition of the defendant, David Leonard Robinson, 24, of 324 Old Island Highway.

BEVERE HEADACHE

An adjournment until this morning was granted by Magistrate William Oster after defense council Alan Bigelow informed him Robinson was suffering from a severe headache and needed medical attention.

Robinson, a short, sturdy, blonde-haired man, had sat throughout the day's proceedings slouched forward in the prisoner's box staring down at the floor.

He wore light khaki casual pants and a white open-neck shirt. A green packet of cigarette tobacco was visible from his shirt breast pocket.

Licensed setter, beatle and spits

Beatle-Faced Dog Will Avoid Pound

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Stephen Lewis, a 15-year-old boy sporting a Beatle-type haircut with bangs which reach his eyebrows, wears Fayette County dog licence No. 50115.

He will wear the metal tag on his shirt collar until he gets a haircut.

That's the ultimatum from his father, Dr. Ben Lewis, head of the department of philosophy and religion at Transylvania College.

When Stephen refused to shear his locks, Dr. Lewis reached the end of his patience and ordered a dog tag for Stephen as well as tags for his English setter, Seth, and his spitz, Princess.

The license application listed the "dog's" name as Stephen Lewis, his breed as "American beatle" and markings as "boy with bangs."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Exploding acid mixed in an airliner lavatory emerged Tuesday as a strong possible cause of Thursday's 52-death Canadian Pacific Airlines crash.

Investigators agreed in a conference here Tuesday a "strong destructive force" was responsible for the DC-8's tail assembly dropping off, but they shied from the word bomb.

Vancouver coroner Glen McDonald said traces of acid were found in the aircraft's aft port washroom, but there was no sign of conventional nitrate explosives or structural failure of the plane.

BOWL FLATTENED

He said the washroom toilet bowl was flattened out, the floor was dished as if pushed down violently, and the washroom basin was bent closed like a tulip by a force pushing up from beneath.

Traces of an unidentified acid were found on the floor, he said, and the acid had spattered several feet away into a stewardess' bag.

NEAR MAJOR SEAM

The toilet bowl was 46 inches from a major seam in the aircraft's inner skin, he said. Perforation and the resulting loss of compression could have been enough to remove the plane's tail section.

FOOLED INFORMATION

Mr. McDonald was spokesman for the 20 officials and investigators after their two-and-a-half hour closed-door meeting to pool information.

He said a bright high school student and a first-year university student could have made a piecemeal mixture with ingredients easily carried aboard.

He said piecemeal acid is "so explosive it's flying on it would set it off."

NO EVIDENCE OF THAT

The biggest problem in mixing it would be to avoid being blown up in the process.

He ruled out the possibility a powderman traveling on the plane had explosives with him, saying a careful examination had turned up "no evidence for that."

He also said he would have expected nitrate traces if a conventional time bomb had been taken aboard in a suitcase.

REMAINS X-RAYED

Mr. McDonald said remains of all passengers will be X-rayed before they are released for burial.

He said three bodies released on Sunday were retrieved long enough for X-rays to be taken.

Fatal Flight

$125,000 Policy Disclosed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says an unemployed Surrey man took out a $125,000 insurance policy on himself before embarking on the Canadian Pacific Airlines flight Thursday that crashed killing 52.

The man was identified as Douglas G. Edgar, 40, one of the passengers on the flight.

The policy would have cost Edgar about $4.50, and was in favor of the widow, Evelyn Victoria Edgar.

Mrs. Edgar would not comment on the report.

Vancouver police said Edgar was convicted twice in 1959 on charges of keeping a gaming house, which they described as a "heavy-betting poker game."

The $125,000 policy is the heaviest single policy known to have been taken out by any of the plane's 46 passengers.
